This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE.

There is a healthy and growing interest in the subject of genealogy, although by many it is still regarded as a "fad," and looked upon as a pursuit for crack-brained old fogies, whose life moves altogether in the past, and for whom no such thing as the present exists. Whether or not this aspect of the subject was ever true, it cannot be gainsaid that many bright historical minds are now interested in this fascinating study, and giving to it much valuable time and attention.

The work constantly being done by these, and others of more humble attainments, well illustrates the claim of an increasing interest, and gives the lie to the smart assertion that the modern man lives for the present and strives for the future only, and does not care a rap who or what his grandfather was. This same modern, if his ideas should be carried out by his descendants, might be somewhat chagrined could he observe the mental attitude of his great-grandchildren toward himself.

Those who affect to despise the egotism of genealogy may read with interest and profit the following extract:

"The preservation of pedigrees is not the mere pastime of the idle and curious; it is the honorable employment of the student and historian, for it has always formed the basis of true history. In the ancient records of Assyria, Egypt, and Arabia, the pedigree of an individual is usually the thread upon which is strung the stirring events of centuries; and so important a place did the preservation of a pedigree occupy among the Israelites, that it was established as a positive obligation upon every Levite in the temple. Josephus regarded genealogical study as of the utmost importance, and, in giving an account of his personal history, boasts, 'I have traced my pedigree as I found it recorded on the public tablets.' Nor is the genealogical form of history peculiar to Semitic races. The earliest Greek records were also those of pedigrees. The histories of Acusilaus of Argos, and Hecatæus of Miletus were entitled genealogies; the fragmentary histories of Xanthus, Charon of Lampsacus, and Hellanicus are strongly marked with the genealogical element; while in the Greek Testament the whole structure of Christianity is based upon the established pedigree of its founder.

"It is true, many lineages contain nothing save the simple records of uneventful generations, but they preserve facts which would otherwise be lost in the history of the American nation. Examples illustrative of this are seen in a comparison of two lineages of historic value as regards Columbia (N. Y.) county history: That of Martin Van Buren, eighth President of the United States, who was born at Kinderhook in 1782; and that of Samuel J. Tilden, governor of New York State, and candidate for the presidency in the great political struggle of 1876, and who was born in New Lebanon. The records of the Van Buren family have not been preserved, and we have therefore no information regarding the pedigree of Martin Van Buren beyond that of his father, although he was undoubtedly descended from an old Dutch ancestry; whereas, in the case of Samuel J. Tilden we are able to trace the lineage of one who is an important figure in American history to the original English stock. Some affect to be indifferent to such matters, on the principle that we judge of a man as we find him, and not on the merits of his ancestors; but such feelings are not in harmony with those of the student of history and of hereditary genius."

Rev. Joseph B. Felt, the distinguished historian and annalist of Salem, once said that in his opinion a genealogy of the Felt family could not be compiled. He himself had spent much time and research among the family archives, and accumulated a large collection of papers pertaining to the history, which has been largely drawn on in preparing the present work. While Mr. Felt's view of the difficulties in the way of a family history may have been overdrawn, there can be no question but that this family is an exceedingly difficult one to reconstruct, from the fact that but little information concerning the earlier generations can be derived from persons now living. It has been necessary to compile almost altogether from ancient public documents and records the facts that appear, and the noticeable absence of dates and minor details result from this fact. It will also be understood that, with the destruction of once existing records, many facts have been lost beyond recovery.

While attempting to produce a record embracing all the male descendants of George Felt of Casco Bay, incidentally one generation of the descendants of Felt daughters has been included when practicable; and, while not attempting to follow their descendants, the compiler has tried to give such information concerning their children as will be of service to the future searcher. That this information is not equally complete in all cases, there are two reasons: one, where a personal and expensive search of records would have been necessary without a reasonable assurance of even partial success; and the other, where parties solicited for the information have persistently failed to respond.

There can be no question but that the fact of marriage of some members of the Felt family has escaped record, or at least eluded the observation of the compiler. This is well attested by the finding in later times of the record of many bearing the name, to whose progenitors we have no clue. These are numerous in the vicinity of Salem and Boston, the early home of the family. It will be understood that a few progenitors, or perhaps even one, might account for these "strays." For the convenience of his successor in this work, the compiler refers to Appendix A, where will be found such stray records and families as he can render no intelligent account of.

Every effort has been made to induce persons bearing the family name, but who have not been enthusiastic concerning the idea of a genealogy, to furnish the information relating to themselves so much needed to make a perfect record; and the compiler has no doubt but that he is even now regarded with asperity for his persistent attempts to investigate into what they undoubtedly consider nobody's business but their own. At least the latter surmise is tenable, judged by the success attending their determination to keep it to themselves.

The compiler has had access to a file of directories of the principal cities of the country, and is prepared to say that while a city directory is sometimes a source of information regarding the existence of individuals, it has been his rather remarkable experience that nearly all attainable information concerning them stops right there. But few of those whom he has addressed through this medium of introduction have seen fit to respond. Undoubtedly, could a free communication have been established, with all whose names have been thus discovered, many family lines now imperfectly recorded might have been completed. It is but justice to add, however, that whenever it has been possible to present the matter in person, no difficulty has been experienced in establishing the legality of the enterprise, and in winning the former recalcitrant as a friend and coöperator.

Biographical accounts in a work of this kind must necessarily be brief, but are of value as preserving for the knowledge of future generations the movements and characteristics of their ancestors. It is not always, nor indeed frequently, possible to obtain information of this character; but where nothing is given, the suggestion that at least the movements of people may be traced by observing the birthplaces of their children, may not be inapt. The compiler has endeavored to secure biographical and historical data relating to all the older members of the family, but is compelled to acknowledge failure in a large per cent. of the cases approached. Undoubtedly a large proportion of the delinquents justify their silence on the ground of having nothing of interest to communicate. This is a mistaken idea; for though their history may be so meager that it may be compressed into two lines of printed matter, still even this is of interest to those for whom the work is compiled, namely, their descendants. We can understand that in the case of people that have long since passed away, more difficulty may present itself to those who are asked to contribute concerning them; for often they do not know where to look for the information sought, and perhaps in some instances do not feel a sufficient personal interest in the matter to prompt them to any effort The compiler cannot undertake a personal search for every item needed, for this would require an enormous outlay of both time and money; and if his written appeals are unheeded, nothing remains but to pass the matter by.

It is the custom for compilers of genealogies to apologize to their readers for the shortcomings of the work, taking upon themselves the onus of all delinquencies. The compiler of this work, however, is unwilling to assume such a position; and positively asserts that he has used every means in his power to render it complete, and how far soever it may fall short of this end, the blame does not all rest with him. He has followed the well-known method pursued at Donnybrook Fair, "When you see a head, hit it." Whenever the name of Felt has been brought to his attention, he has not refrained from following the clue until at least three letters, and sometimes five, have been sent to the address indicated, and it has become thoroughly apparent that the person addressed is too modest or indifferent to lend any aid to the work. The compiler is positive that if each letter he has written had successfully elicited such information as could have been given in reply, the family record would be practically perfect. There are, undoubtedly, errors and blunders in the book, due to the compiler's own carelessness, or his inability to decipher the idiosyncrasies of a strange chirography, aided, perhaps, by that of the compositor and proof-reader. For such sins of commission as can be laid at his door he is willing to be forgiven, but the sin of omission he repudiates.

It should not be forgotten that the compilation of this work extends over a period of five years, and that naturally changes have occurred in families, no knowledge of which has reached the compiler.

The origin of the FELT family is unknown, neither have we any certain knowledge of the former home of George Felt, the immigrant, though there is reason for believing that he came from Wales.

It has been suggested that the name is of Flemish or Dutch origin, and that the family settled with others of like nationality in Wales or on the border.

The name seems to signify the same in various languages, and to be derived from words meaning "field" or "open country." There is a probability that its earlier form was Felch, perhaps from "fells" (moor). No early trace of the family in England or Wales has been found, though the name is said to be still extant there.

That the family had some standing appears probable, as a "Coat of Arms" is recorded to it in Berry's Encyclopædia Heraldica; viz.:—"FELT.—gu. a buck's head couped at the neck, ar. attired or. Crest, on a mural coronet or, a stag, passant, ppr."

FIRST GENERATION.

EXPLANATION OF ARRANGEMENT.—This will be readily understood. The descendants are numbered consecutively on the left hand side of the page, and a star (*) prefixed to a number indicates that the record of the person thus designated is carried forward and will be found in the succeeding generation under the same number, this time located in the center of the line. All the children of one family thus carried forward are grouped under a caption designating the parents, and the eldest child takes precedence in the arrangement.

George Felt is found in Charlestown, Mass., in 1633. He was born in 1601, and tradition relates that he came to America with Endicott.[1] He was not among the first settlers of Charlestown, there being a few persons there in 1628, but the following year about one hundred people came with Thomas Graves from Salem, and laid the foundation of the town, which they named in honor of Charles the First. Charlestown was incorporated June 24, 1629, and the first church was organized November 2, 1632. The original town was laid out in two-acre divisions, and each settler was granted one of them for a homestead. We have the testimony of George Felt himself that the year of his advent in this town was that already named, for in 1681 he describes himself as about 80 years of age, and testifies "that the town of Charlestown gave him an house plott of two acres of land lying in the common on the left hand as you go to Cambridge betwixt the ground that was Rice Morrisses and Goble's, which is now in the hands of Thomas Welch Senr, which plott was given him about forty-eight years since."

The wife of George Felt was Elizabeth,[2] daughter of widow Prudence Wilkinson,[3] whose home in Charlestown was on the south side of Mill Hill, nearly adjoining that of her son-in-law. Whether he married in Charlestown, or was already married when he came, is cause for conjecture, but it is probable that they were already married and brought children with them.

[2] Rev. Joseph B. Felt states that an Elizabeth Felt died in 1662, aged 50 years. If this was the wife of George Felt, he subsequently married another of the same baptismal name.

The town of Charlestown, although at the time of its annexation to Boston in 1873, the smallest in the State, covering only about 600 acres, originally embraced within its limits the territory now contained in Woburn, Burlington, Stoneham, Malden, Somerville, and parts of Reading, Medford, Cambridge, and Arlington. On the 10th of January, 1634, it was agreed at a meeting of the inhabitants, "Y^{t} ye inhab. und^{r} mentioned have planting ground laid out unto them bet. the east end of the lotts above mentioned at the Creek, having new town pale on the south." Of this division "George ffelt" received four acres. This was on the "Mistick side," or beyond the river of that name and within the confines of the present town of Everett. On this side of the river he subsequently acquired considerable land, as will appear presently.

Up to this time all public business had been transacted by a general convention of the people, but this practice having become cumbersome and unsatisfactory, it was thought best to organize a new form of town government; consequently, on the 10th of February, 1634–5, the following "town order" creating a board of selectmen was passed: —

"An ord^{r} made by the Inhabitants of Charlestowne At a ffull meeting, for the Governm^{t} of the Towne by Selectmen:

"1634. In consideration of the great trouble and chearg of the Inhabitants of Charlestowne by reason of the Frequent meeting of the townsmen in generall, and y^{t} by reason of many men meeting things were not so easily brought unto a ioynt Issue: It is therefore agreed by the sayde townesmen ioytly that these eleuen men whose names are written on the other syde, with the advise of Pastor and teacher desired in any case of conscience, shall entreat of all such busines as shall concerne the townsmen, The choise of officers excepted, and what they or the greater part of them shall conclude of, the rest of the towne willingly to submit Vnto as their owne pper act, and these 13 (sic) to contineu in imployment for one yeare next ensuing the date hereof, being dated this: 10th of February 1634.

"In wittnes of this agreement wee whose names are vnder written haue set to o^{r} hands."

There were thirty-three signers to this order, among them George Felt, and it will be observed that his signature, which may yet be seen upon the ancient records of Charlestown, is written FELCH. This, or FELTCH, is thought to have been the original name, which was easily and naturally contracted into FELT. All the descendants of George have written the name Felt.

By the year 1638 the necessity of an accurate public record of their possessions was felt by the people of Charlestown, and on the 26th of the first month (March) Abraham Palmer was "chosen by the Towne for keepeing the Towne Booke, as also to Record all pprieties of Houses, Lands, Meadow or Pasture, as any Inhabitants of ye Towne are, or shall bee possest of accord^e^: to an ord^r^ of Court provided in y^t^ behalfe."

Mr. Palmer, who was the second incumbent of the town clerk's office, having accomplished this, the following entry appears upon the records: —

"1638. On the 28th day of the X month was taken A True Record of all such houses & Lands as are possessed by the Inhabita^nts^ of Charlstown, wheth^r^ by purchase, by gift from the Towne, or by allottments as they were devided amongst them by a Joynt Consent aft^r^ the Gen^ll^ Court had setled theire Bounds, by granting eight miles from the old Meeting house into the Contry Northwest North^r^ly, &c. the bounds of the s^d^ Towne Lying or being bettwixt Cambridge alias New Towne, on the West South west, & Boston Land on the East as it app^rs^ upon Record by the sever^ll^ grants of Gen^ll^ Courts to all the affores^d^ Bounds."

George Felt was found to be the owner of the following property within the limits of the town: —

"1. One Dwelling house with a garden plott, scituate on the south west of the mill hill, butting southward upon Charls river, northeast upon crooked lane, bounded on the norwest by Nicolas Trerrice, and on the southeast by Ben. Hubbard.[1]

"2. One milch cow common.[2]

"3. ffive acres of wood land by estimation, more or lesse, scituate in misticke feilde, butting south upon the high way towards the south river, north upon the woodland, bounded on the west by Prū Wilkinson, and on the east by Rob Hayle.[3]

[1] and [2]. These two were within the limits of the present Charlestown District of Boston.

[3] Within the present limits of Everett.

"4. Haulf an acre of meaddow by estimation, more or lesse, lying in mistick marshes, butting west towards the north river, bounded on the north by Will Dade, and on the south by George Bunker.[1]

"5. ffive acres of woodland by estimation, more or lesse. scituate in mistick feilde, butting northeast upon Nicolas Stowers, southwest upon Ric. Palgrave, bounded on the northwest by Phillip Drinker, and on the southeast by Rice Morrice.[2]

"6. ffifteene acres of woodland, more or lesse, scituate in mistick feilde, butting northeast upon Abr. Palmer and James mathewes, southwest upon Ed Convers, bounded on the northwest by Thō Lynde, and on the southeast by James Pemberton.[3]

"7. Thirtie and eight acres of land, more or lesse, scituate in waterfeilde, butting northwest upon ffrancis Norton, southeast upon Rich Palgrave and Thō Peirce, bounded on the southwest by Edward Sturges, and on the northeast by horne pond."[4]

Thus it appears that George Felt was the owner of a very respectable property, as has previously been intimated.

On the 19th of January, 16$\frac{39}{40}$, Elizabeth Felt, the wife of George, was admitted to the communion of the First Church, and a week later, January 26th, presented her three children, Elizabeth, Mary, and George, for baptism. No record has been found to show that the father was a member of the Charlestown Church. Elder John Green, in his entry of the above mentioned baptisms, calls the name Felch, although he recorded Elizabeth, the mother, at the time of her admission to the church, as Felt.

Some time during the year 1640, George Felt obtained three hundred acres of land from John Philips, a Welshman, at Broad Cove on Casco Bay, in Maine, and by 1643 had become one of the pioneer settlers of North Yarmouth. "The advent of George Felt in Broad Cove may be said to be the birthday of North Yarmouth." This locality was then called Wescustogo by the Indians. Upon this land he built a stone house, or garrison, but his title to the property not proving sufficient, he re-purchased it in 1643 of Richard Vines, the agent of Sir Ferdinando Gorges, who held a patent of all the lands embraced within the territory of Maine, east of the Sagadahoc River. After a few years' residence at Wescustogo, George Felt returned to Charlestown and took up his abode on "Mistick side," and when the town of Malden was incorporated, May 2, 1649, he was found to reside within its limits. About this time he disposed of a portion of his "Mistick side" property, as witnessed by the following deeds: —

"Know all men by these presents, that I Georg Felch, Inhabitant of Charlestown, on Mistike syde, doe by this acknowledge that I have sould, and am full payd for it, unto James Barret, of the same town, three akers of Arrable land, more or lesse, which I bought of ffrancis Mills, which sayd land lyes on Mistik syde, within the rayles, bounded on the east syde by Richard Kettell, and by the cuntry high way on the west syde, bounded on the north by Edward Carrington, and on the south by A high way. And the sayd James Barret is to enjoy and to hould the sayd three akers of land for him and his heighers for ever.

"In witness hereof, I, Georg ffelch, have set my hand to a bill of sale of this same, the 26th day of the 3rd moneth, 1648." This land was within the present limits of Everett.

"Know all men by these presents, that I, Georg Felch, of Charlestown, do acknowledge that I have sould unto Gardy James of the same towne, half my Ten Aker Lott, lying on Mistik syde, the other halfe of which Lott my mother Wilkinson occupieth and enjoyeth, and I doe hereby resign over all my right, titell, and interest in the sayd half ten Aker Lott unto the sayd Gardy James, to be his and his heigres for ever.

"Witness my hand this 1st day of the 2d Mo. 1649."

In a deed[1] given Aug. 4, 1664, to John Phillips of Boston, in which he describes himself as of "Casco in New England, mason," he disposes of his "dwelling house with the barne, out houseing & Land and meadow ground," also twenty acres of land "belonging to the houselott," and "allso sixteen acres and a halfe of swamp," two acres in "Charlestowne Common," twenty-four acres in "Charles-towne comons on Misticke side near spott pond," and fourteen acres of meadow "lying in Charlestowne bounds." At the time this deed was given he had already returned to Casco Bay, and this was the closing out of his possessions in Massachusetts.

During the time of his absence from Maine, George Felt retained the ownership of his possessions there, and about 1660 returned to Broad Cove. The deposition of his son Moses, made Nov. 30, 1733, and recorded in Book 17, page 76, of York County Records, in which he states "that he lived in North Yarmouth in Casco Bay, ab' fourteen years before the Narragansett Indian Warr broke out," fixes this year as the time of his return.

In 1670 he added to his possessions by another purchase from John Philips, of 2,000 acres of land at Broad Cove, for which he paid the sum of sixty pounds. He had already lived upon it three years and improved it.

In 1675 the Narragansett War broke out and continued until 1678. We have no account of George Felt's flight from his home, but are told that North Yarmouth was deserted during the war, and undoubtedly for this period he sojourned elsewhere. After peace was restored he returned, and continued upon his plantation until 1684, when, by a piece of glaring injustice, he was despoiled of the accumulations of a lifetime. In order to clearly show how this was brought about, the following account, adapted from an article written by William H. Sargent. Esq., of Portland, on the "Derivation of Titles in North Yarmouth,"[1] is presented in connection with facts obtained from other sources.

The title to all lands in Maine originated in a grant made by King James I, in April, 1606, to the Council of Plymouth. The Council on the 10th of August, 1622, granted to Sir Ferdinando Gorges and Captain John Mason "all the lands situated between the rivers Merrimack and Sagadahock, extending back to the great lakes and the River of Canada." Gorges and Mason obtained a new patent from the King, but in 1634 divided their property, Gorges taking all east of the Piscataqua, and Mason the western part. Gorges' patent for his portion, procured from the King, bears date April 3, 1639. He obtained also power to govern his province, and appointed Richard Vines his steward general, who, as Gorges' agent, sold to George Felt the land which he had already purchased of John Phillips, the Welshman. At this early day no provision had been made for the recording of deeds, and many of the older evidences of title were overlooked when the practice of recording land had become established.

In 1630 the Council of Plymouth infringed upon its grant to Gorges by giving to John Dy and others the Province of Lygonia, a tract lying between Capes Porpoise and Elizabeth, and extending forty miles inland. This did not include Broad Cove, where George Felt had his possessions, that being situated farther east. The following year a company came over in the ship "Plough" to settle under this last named patent, but being dissatisfied with the country, dispersed. About 1643. Col. Alexander Rigby obtained a nominal interest from the survivors, in the Province of Lygonia, evidently with the hope of being able to oust Gorges and thus gain a tangible interest in the property, and commissioned his friend, George Cleeves, as deputy-governor, and soon after set up a claim to all the lands as far east as the Sagadahock, thus bringing Broad Cove in North Yarmouth within their claim. "This gave rise to interminable disputes and strife between the Rigby and Gorges factions, that continued, every now and then breaking out afresh, and were never finally composed till both claimants had either submitted to or sold out to Massachusetts."

When the Narragansett war occurred the settlement of North Yarmouth was deserted and the town destroyed by the Indians. After the return of peace in 1678, the survivors of the war returned, the title to the property was purchased by Massachusetts of Gorges' heir, Sir Thomas Danforth appointed Provincial President, and at a court held by him at York in 1680 North Yarmouth was incorporated as a plantation. June 23d of this year George Felt conveyed to Walter Gendall of Spurwink, "one hundred acres of upland lying and being on the eastward side of George Felt's ould house in Casco Bay, about eighty rodd from s^d^ house, vizt: beginning at a three forked bla(ck) oake tree neare the highway, being marked on both sides, and so down to ye water side, and then to runne upon a square untill the whole hundred acres be fully compleated and accomplished, with priviledg and full propriety and benefitt of the sea down to low water marke: bredth of his s^d^ tract of land, with four acres of fresh meaddows lying about three miles from Felt's ould feild, and two acres of salt meddows at the head of Great Cove wh^r^ Walter Gendall pleaseth to lay it out, with all the meddows belonging to the hundred acres of upland, with all the mines, minneralls, woods, underwoods, proffits, priviledges or lybertys, easements, and all other appurtenances to the premises belonging or any way apartaining."[1] Gendall subsequently purchased other tracts of land, established a profitable saw-mill, and became a leading citizen and man of means. He was one of the trustees appointed to "lay out" the town, and in doing this, as the 2,000 acres belonging to George Felt happened to be wanted in the new division to the settlers, it was apparently taken without leave or license, presumably by claim to defect in the title, and was divided among the new comers. Mr. Sargent adds, "I cannot close this sketch without a passing notice of one of the most glaring bits of injustice ever perpetrated by the cupidity of men. This was the course pursued by the new comers, by which the venerable George Felt was despoiled of the labors of a lifetime, and deprived of the large tract twice purchased by him, the second time from Gorges, on whom all of the titles depended. Instead of his right to his 2,000 acres, a petty sop of a few small lots was finally, after long importunity, thrown to his heirs, instead of their rightful inheritance. This is made all the more noticeable because they did respect Walter Gendall's title to what he had purchased from this very same Felt. If one title was good, so much the better should have been considered the one that had never been alienated. But then the one man was poor and old; the other was rich and influential."

Mr. Sargent is evidently in error in intimating that the 2,000 acres taken from George Felt was the same that he purchased of John Phillips in 1640, for in a petition to Governor Andros in 1688, George Felt himself stated that about 18 years before he had bought a plantation or farm of John Phillips of Boston, at a place called Great Cove in Casco Bay, containing about 2,000 acres, for which he paid 60 pounds, that he had occupied it three years before the purchase; and after the Indian war, it was withheld from him by Casco people, and he being impoverished could not recover it. He was then suffering from want, being about 87 years old" Further evidence is found in a deed[2] given March 20, 1727, by Moses and George Felt, the son and grandson of George Felt of Broad Cove, to the committee of North Yarmouth, in which they recite that "whereas the said George Felt formerly bought of John Phillips of Casco Bay afores^d^, a certain Tract or Parcell of land lying at Broad Cove, in Northyarmouth afores^d^, containing three hundred acres, beginning at ye falls called Felt's falls, and so down the Broad Cove or bay, to a Red Oak Tree near the water being the bounds of the lands which ye committee of the town of Northyarmouth formerly granted to Walter Gendall, and from s^d waterside and falls to run up into the wilderness, upon a square, until the said Three Hundred Acres be fully compleated, and also three acres of salt marsh at Broad Cove and four acres of fresh meadow at some distance from said Felt's house: which lands and premises the aforesaid George Felt again purchase of ye agent of Sir Ferdinando Gorges about ye year 1643: and the said Felt built a house thereon and lived in it, and possessed and improved ye said land and premises above forty years without molestation, and until ye year 1684, excepting one hundred acres thereof lying next to the land of ye said Walter Gendall, and the afores^d three acres of salt marsh, and also the four acres of fresh meadow which the s^d George Felt in ye year 1680, sold to the said Walter Gendall, who improved the same till driven off by the Indian Enemy in the year 1688. And the s^d George Felt, in the year 1684, gave and granted the remaining two hundred acres of the afores^d tract of land unto the said Moses and George Felt, to be equally divided between them, who continued in the peaceable possession of the said house and land until drove off by the Indians in the year 1688."

The above serves to show that Felt's original purchase was 300 acres, the title to which was confirmed by repurchase of Gorges and never afterwards disputed, while the 2,000 acres of which he was deprived was that purchased of Phillips in 1670 for the sum of sixty pounds. Undoubtedly Phillips' title rested upon an Indian deed, to which sort at the time of the resettlement of North Yarmouth no respect was paid, and which were subsequently decided by the Court to be invalid, valid titles resting only upon the Gorges patent.

After the disposition of a portion of his property to Walter Gendall George Felt returned to Malden, notwithstanding the statement made in the deed given by Moses and George Felt 3d, and previously here quoted, that he lived at Casco Bay "until ye year 1684." This move was probably rendered necessary by the fact that he was aged and feeble and unable to longer struggle for existence upon his farm. His wife accompanied him and May 29, 1681, "upon hearing the petition of James Nichols, Sr. of Malden" (his son-in-law) the General Court ordered "that George Felt and his wife be accounted inhabitants of the town of Malden and accordingly the Selectmen of the town to take care of them."[1] This care was given after a fashion and the same year Goodman Cully was paid 10 shillings for "Hows room" for them. Thus the once possessor of over 2,000 acres became the first town charge of Malden. In 1684 George Felt conveyed all that was left of his 300 acres at Casco Bay to his son and grandson and was undoubtedly able to live upon the proceeds of the sale for a time, for it was not until October 1, 1686, that the town of Malden was called upon for further aid, when it was "Voted, that the Selectmen are to take care of ould felt till the County Courte." June 22, 1688, George Felt petitioned for aid and redress in the following pathetic form:—

The Humble Petition of George Felt Senr of Mauldon,

"To his Excellency Sr Edmund Andros, K^nt, one of his Maj^ties most honorourable privy bed chamber, Capt Generall and & Gov. in Chief in and over his Maj^ties Territory and Dominion of New England in America.[2]

SHEWETH:

That it is my grief that I am compelled to trouble yor Excellency at this time But having about eighteen years since purchased of one Jno Phillips of Bost, Gent., late Deceased, a farme or Plaintaintion at a Place called the Great Cove (in Casco Bay) containing about two thousand acres of upland and marsh as by a firm Deed under s^d Phillips hand and seale, for which I then paid him sixty pounds money, and improved s^d Farme or plaintation severall years before I bought it so that the whole time of my occupying it was about one and twenty years, But some time after the late Indian Warr it was withheld from me by some of the inhabitants of s^d Town of Caskoe Bay and being by s^d warr much impoverished I could not recover it out of their hands. I also am now forced to suffer for want of convenient care taken of me in my present distresse being about Eighty seaven years old and very crasy and weak,

Therefore, yor Petition^r recommendeth his case to yor Excellencies prudent consideration humbly beseaching and earnestly begging that if it seem meet and Convenient yor Excellency would be pleased to favor yor petion^r that he may have confirmation of his s^d lands und^r such moderate quit rent, as well as an ord^r to ye Townsmen of Maulden aboves^d for something at present to releave ye petitioner in this his extreem poverty. The which shall farther oblige yor petion^r as in duty bound daily to pray for y^r Excellency."

This redress was denied him, and we find further aid extended to him by the Selectmen of Malden, viz.:—"June 8, 1691, voted that there be raised 4 or 5 pounds for the present supply of george felt and his wife to be paid in provision or in money."

The aged couple were now evidently growing feebler, and the town voted, March 14, 1692, with a prudent provision for rebate in case its charity should prove overgenerous "that the towne doe alow goodman nicols aleuen pound in or of money for this present yeare ensuing for the maintanance of his father and mother felt, if ether of them dy with in the year, after funiral charges, what is left to return to the selectmen or there order." The record ends here. The sturdy pioneer whose advent at North Yarmouth was reckoned as its "birth-day," and whose courageous manhood helped to establish it firmly upon the foundation of prosperity it enjoys to-day; wronged in his old age by those who should have aided him instead; driven out to seek a home of charity; assured that his "funiral expenses" were provided for, died in 1693, aged 92 years, and his wife "much advanced in years" followed him in 1694.

George Felt, Jr. was baptized with his two sisters in the First Church of Charlestown, Mass., one week after the admission of their mother to the membership of this church, as witnessed by the following entry from its records. "1638-11th mo: day 26. Elizabeth Felch: George Felch and Mary Felch the son and daughters of Elizabeth were baptized."[1] It is probable that at this time he was several years old. He was undoubtedly taken to Casco Bay by his father, and when he returned from there about 1649 came with him. It seems probable that he lived in Salem for a time before returning to Casco Bay, for the signature of his son, George Felt 3d, to a petition partly quoted here, would appear to indicate that he was a house proprietor in that place prior to 1661. A meeting was called "at ye dwelling house of Mr. Sam[l] Goltrite in Salem, in holder, on ye 29th day of June, 1713," of citizens, (and probably of their heirs or representatives,) who were "Legall proprietors of ye Comon and undevided Lands in ye township of Salem, by ye laws of this Province, having Cottages or dwelling places before ye year 1661." He returned to Casco Bay about 1660 (at the same time as his father), and was made freeman in Falmouth in that year. He married, November 25, 1662, Philippa Andrews, daughter of Samuel and Jane Andrews,[1] who was born in 1632. On this occasion he received from his father a "marriage portion" as shown by the following deed. "Promised by George Felt the elder to his son George Felt the younger to pay him out the Day of his Marriage, which was the 25 day of 9^{ber} 1662, to the full & Intyre Sum of fourty pounds Sterling as also at the Decease and Death of the Said George the Elder there is and ought to Bee Due and paid unto the said George the younger out of the Estate of Said George the Elder, So much as shall make up and Compleat the above Expressed Sum of fourty pounds to be and be made a full hundred pounds Sterling to be from hence fourth proper to the Said George the younger, his heirs, Executors, administrators or assigns, Notwithstanding any Deeds Conveyances or Delegations to be made by the said George the Elder. In witness to this Truth and to confirm the Obligation hereunto I George Felt the Elder this 27 Day of 9^{ber} 1662 have subscribed my name. . . . this above written writing was Entered into the booke of records of Scarborrow and Falmouth."[2]

In 1670 he received from his mother-in-law, who had married Arthur Mackworth for her second husband and who had been for the second time left a widow, the gift of a homestead, as evidenced by the following deed. "Be it knowne unto all men by these presents, That I Jane Mackworth of ye Towne of ffalmouth alias Casco Bay, widow of Arthur Mackworth Gent^{n} Deceased. For divers good Causes & consideracōns me Thereto moving more Especialy for & in consideracōn of a Marriage that hath been betwixt my daughter Phillipe & George Felt, haue given granted &c a quantity of Land adjoyning to his now dwellling house in ye Towne of ffalmouth alias Casco, bounded as followeth, with a deep Gutt hard by a parcell of pines at a place commonly called or knowne by ye name of ye Mussle cove alias doco Missick upon ye South West Side of my daughter purchas her land which was given her by my Deceased husband Mr. Arthur Mackworth Deceased & So in breadth to ye bounds of my

[1] Samuel Andrews was a citizen of London. He came to America in the ship Increase, April 12, 1635, with his family consisting of his wife Jane, and two daughters. They had a son Samuel, born at Casco Bay. Mr. Andrews died in 1637, and his widow married Arthur Mackworth, one of the most respectable settlers of the Bay. He died in 1657. His widow removed to Boston during the Indian war, in 1675, and died there the year following.

This gift was evidently made in accordance with the desire of her husband expressed upon his death-bed, his informal will being known to us through the testimony of a neighbor, as follows: "This 17th day of August; 1660, I Robert Jordan do ascertajne on my oath, that I Heard Mr. Arthur Makeworth on his death bedd declare that his full will & testament was, that his wife Mis Jane Mackeworth should by her wisedom dispose of his whoole estate aequally as neare as might bee betweene her former husband's children & the Children between them, & In Case any shortnesse was on either side, that itt should rather bee on his owne Childrens side & further sayth not onely the desease of the s^d Mr. Arthur Mackeworth was before the submission of these Towns of Sarbrough & Falmouth to the Massatusetts authority vnder my hand & on my oath, by mee Robrt Jordan."[2]

At about the time of George Felt's return to Maine the people of Casco Bay had become restive by reason of the uncertainty of their government. Though now under the jurisdiction of the Massachusetts Colony, many of the settlers objected to the rule of the magistrates appointed by the General Court, claiming that their appointment had been obtained through fraudulent misrepresentation, and undoubtedly there was a feeling that Massachusetts had gotten outside of the limits covered by her own patent. At this juncture a petition was presented to the General Court signed by a number of the dwellers at Casco Bay, George Felt, Jr., among them, as follows:

"1660.—To the Hon. Gen. Court of the Mass. or whom els it shall or may concern, the humble petition of divers inhabitants and freemen of Plymouth, humbly sheweth. That whereas there hath been a sad contention in these parts concerning government, Your petitioners most of them living upon their labor, and desirous rather to live in peace and learne to be obedient and submit to what government it shall please the Lord and our sovereign to appoint over us, than to contend or determine who our governors shall be, yet there hath latelie certaine men appeared in our names att ye Hon. Gen. Court, and as we are informed presented a petition which was without our consents or knowledge, for had ye government been settled and that we could have acted with freedom of spirit wee would never have dishonored the Hon. Gen. Court, with men of such lives and conversations, as are first, George Cleeves, who is upon record for breach of oath and accused of forgery. Mr. Phippen not many days before his departure was beating and drawing of ye blood of his Majesties subjects and stands upon record for slandering ye deputie governor and was always a man of contention and strife since he came in our parts. John Phillips hath acknowledged himself guilty of keeping a woman which is none of his wife this 14 years. These men cam in your names and exercise authorite over us with many soare threatenings wherefore our humble request is, that if itt please the Lord to continue us still under your government you would be pleased to grant us the liberty that other of his Majesties subjects have, and you by Article granted, y^t is freedom to vote for our officers and not such men imposed upon us, and we shall ever pray &c."

In 1663 matters appear to have been but little better, and another declaration, with George Felt among the signers, was forwarded to the Court at York, as follows:

"1663, 4 July. A Declaration of ye Townes of Scarborrow & ffalmouth, Black Point & Casco, to be Presented to ye Hon^d Court att York.—Wee ye subscribers according to a petition presented by some of vs to ye Hon^d Generall Court of ye Massachusetts doe hereby Declare that we are not willing to contend or Determine who shall be our Gouernours butt that to submitt to whom itt shall please ye Lord & our Soueraing to appoint ouer vs. Neither to resist

Yett wee are nott willing to subiect or submit ourselves to ye claims of either Authorities in this province or Countie for fear of bringing ourselues into further trouble till itt shall bee Determined by his Maiestie our Soueraing Lord ye King to whom we properlie belong, but if itt shall so please ye Claimes of both Authorities to act according to ye agreement alls wel, wee shall willinglie and Chearfulli Submit thereto Till we haue a definite resolution from our Souerings.

"Wee doe Likewise Declare our griefe of Spiritt for ye hard and viciull cariage & vsage wch not Long since exercised vpon an Antient officer amongst vs who acted in his Maiesties Name and for ought we know by Authorite Deriued from him, and ye Daylie threatenings which are Daylie putt forth concerning them y^t joyned with him in acting & those y^t obayed in submitting and as wee concieue in Confidence wee are bound to Doe the vtmost of ovr endeauors for ye preseruation of any from amongst vs to be vsed in ye Like manner by reason wee are fullie perswaded y^t ye Hon^rd Court neur gaue any order for Svch actings and y^t some of vs haue often heard him and others declare y^t if ye H^d General Court had ought to say against them they would be willing to goe if they sent but ye Least officer for them.

"Subscribed vs fourth day of Juli 1663."

In 1665, three Commissioners were appointed by the King, into whose hands was given command of the province. A few years later, Massachusetts again claimed jurisdiction, and finally, in 1677, settled the vexed question by purchasing of Ferdinando Gorges, the grandson and heir of Sir Ferdinando, the original patentee, for the sum of 1250 pounds sterling, all rights in the Province of Maine, expressly "excepting all leases, grants and conveyances made by the original Proprietor, or his agents engaged in planting the Province."

July 29, 1666, George Felt appears as a juryman at a Court held at Casco, which tried James Robinson of Black Point for the murder of Christopher Collins of the same place, of which charge he was acquitted.

In 1672, in conjunction with Jenkin Williams and Francis Neale, he bought a large tract of land of the Indians, as witnessed by the following deed.[1]

"This indenture or covenant made this 14th day of August in the yeare of our Lord 1672, betwixt Nanaadconit, Wavaad Button, Indian Sagamores, of the one part, and Francis Neale, George Fealt & Jenkin Williams, planters, of the other party Witnesseth, that Wee Nanaadconit, & Wavaad Button, for and in consideration of a certaine sum of money or moneys worth to us paid in hand before the sealing and signing of these presents, wherewith we acknowledge ourselves fully sattisfied paid and contented: have given, granted, bargained and sold & by these presents doe absolutely give, grant, sell, aliene, enfoefe & confirm unto Francis Neale, George Fealt and Jenkin Williams, their heires & Assigns forever, a quantity or parcell of land, lying and being near Casco Bay & up the river called Psumpskitt river & bounded as followeth, viz: On ye Northeast Side of the river, and to begin where Mr. Geo. Munioy according to his deede which about five or six years since he had from us, endeth, upon the same side of the river, and So to run downe by the Side of the river to the falls & Soe along the Side of the river within four score poles of John Waklies now dwelling house, and six miles up in ye country: together with all lands, marshes, wood, timber, trees, underwoods, with ye privilidges of the river and falls and all other profitts and privilidges of What nature Soever is or may be contained within the above mentioned bounds: alwayes excepted, that if any of the aforesaid land be within the now claime of title of the Massachusetts Colony or Jurisdiction we do not presume to dispose of itt. To have & to hold &c, &c., . . . And in witness of ye truth hereof, Wee, Nanaadconit and Wavaad Button, have hereunto Sett our hands and Seals this fourth of August 1672."

Other Indians afterward claimed this land on the plea that those who had disposed of it had no right to do so. George Felt's share of this tract was in 1690 conveyed by his son George to David Phippen of Salem, the other two proprietors having already deeded him their portion.

In 1673 the town of Falmouth granted to George Felt Lower Clapboard Island, lying in the bay about a mile off his house,[1]

"Att a meeting of Select Men of this Towne of Falmouth this 23 January 1673, Granted to George Felt Junr the Lower Claboard Island with the priviledges thereunto belonging Excepting Liberty for any Inhabitants of the Towne to fetch Stones from thence or for Fowling, all Towne right in it's granted to him. . . this writing was entered into the records of Scarbar row and falmouth."

He also possessed the Three Brothers and the Little Chebeague Islands in Casco Bay.[2]

We find also another piece of property deeded to him, the record of which is as follows:

"This is to certifie Whom soever it may Concern that I Marjary Haynes have set and let to George Felt of Casco Bay a Tract or parcell of Marsh formerly belonging to my former husband Nicholas White Dec'd lying at the North East End of Mericancague Neck, all and euery part of the Same lying in two parts with a point of upland running between and being on the Eastern Side of the

The day following the execution of the above deed, William Haynes, schoolmaster, the husband of Marjery, conveyed to George Felt,

"My right and Intrest of my Plantation at a place Comonly called pine point according to his bill of Sale, together with a piece of Marsh at a place Called Little river where upon I doe grant him Legall possession as really as tho I weare personally there." [2]

In the beginning of the year 1675 the prosperity of Falmouth stood at a high point, the town was occupied by energetic and enterprising people and mills had been established upon various streams in the vicinity. When, in June of this year, King Philip's War broke out in the Plymouth Colony, George Felt, Jr., was peacefully enjoying his home at Mussel Cove, about two miles eastward from the "Neck," or the "Machigone" of the natives, the present city of Portland.

Although the Falmouth Indians evinced no other than a peaceable disposition towards the English, it was thought best on the part of the authorities to deprive them of their weapons; but upon attempting to carry this measure into effect, collisions naturally occurred and the fear and jealousy of the Indians were aroused. They forgot all the former kindnesses they had received, and open hostilities between them and the settlers became the signal for mutual extermination.

The Indians began by gratifying their revenge upon those whom they deemed unfriendly, but, through the influence of the disaffected Narragansett Indians, the war ended in the indiscriminate slaughter of the settlers. An early and severe winter put a stop to hostilities, but not until some 50 settlers and over 90 Indians had been slain. In the summer of 1676 the war again broke out with renewed fury and with greater loss of life and property than on the previous year, and George Felt was numbered among its victims. So furious and persistent were the Indian attacks upon the people of Falmouth, that they fled for safety to a garrison upon James Andrew's Island, now known as Cushing's Island.

The Rev. William Hubbard, Minister of Ipswich, published in 1677, a History of the Indian Wars in New England and in the quaint and interesting language of this narrative we give the closing scenes in the life of George Felt, Jr.

"The day after, one George Felt suspecting the worst by reason of a smoak he saw on the opposite side of the Town, took his wife and Children into a Canoo to see what the matter was but when he came near a point of Land not far off, he found several of his Neighbors goods, which made him conclude their Owners were killed, which was a sufficient warning to him likewise to fly for his Life which he did to the same Island. . . . Within a while after, or much about the same time, another sad Accident befel six or seven of them that belonged to Casco. For upon the twenty third of September some Persons that belonged to a Sloop and a Shallop that were pressed into the service, . . . were over desirous to save some of their Provision, to which end they first made their Address to Captain Hathorne (Under whom they were ordered to serve) desiring they might be released: the Captain told them he could not do it, but desired them to have patience for a while, they told him, that they must and would go, else their Families must starve at Home; the Captain told them further of the danger, and bid them not stir at their peril: However they would go, and soon after went to Mount-joyes Island to fetch Sheep, where they landed seven men; but the Indians presently set upon them, they presently betook themselves to the Ruines of a Stone House where they defended themselves as long as they could; but at last they were all destroyed either with Stones cast in upon them, or else with the Enemies shot, except one, who, though at first it was hoped that his wounds were not mortal, yet soon after dyed thereof; Amongst them was one George Felt, much lamented, who had been more active than any man in those parts against the Indians, but at last he lost his own life amongst them, in this too desperate an Adventure."

The "Mount-joyes" (Munjoy) Island, here named, is now known as House Island.

Phillipa, the widow of George Felt, removed, probably at this time, to Salem, and married there, Dec. 19, 1682, Samuel Platt, an early settler of Rowley, Mass, as his second wife. He died and she married again, April 9, 1690, Thomas Nelson, as his third wife. He was the town clerk or recorder of Rowley, from 1694 to 1697. He died April 5, 1712. She died Sept. 29, 1709. The children of George Felt removed finally to Salem about 1690.

Aaron Felt, born ——; was probably a son of George. We learn that George had more than two sons by the testimony of Moses Felt where he says, "I and one of my brothers."[1] April 25, 1679, we hear of Aaron Felt as the defendant in a suit brought by George Munjoy for cutting the plaintiff's grass "on his meadow at Capissicke, and carrying it away to his Damage to ye valew of Tenn pounds." For this he was find 10 shillings and costs of Court, £2.10.0.[2] He is witness to a deed of land in Falmouth, from George Cleeves to George Munjoy, dated April 27, 1665.[3] He had land near Felt's Falls in North Yarmouth.[4]

Aaron Felt probably died before middle age. He may have left children, but we do not know of any.

Elizabeth Felch—was Baptized," might furnish cause for perplexity were it not almost absolutely certain that it refers to a previous Moses who undoubtedly died in infancy or early childhood. This matter is referred to here in disproval of the statement many times made that Moses Felt of Casco Bay, and later of Rumney Marsh, was the same individual whose birth is recorded as above. In the early days, as well as now, it was customary in legal depositions to state the age of the deponent as a means of identification; this in connection with the date of the deposition furnishes a reasonable proof of the year of birth. In substantiation of the compiler's theory he begs leave to call attention to a few extracts from the public records, viz.: "March 4, 1713-4," Moses Felt testifies that he is 63 years of age. (Essex Land Records, Vol. 32, p. 138.) "Dec. 6, 1718," Moses Felt testifies that he is 68 years of age. (Essex Land Records, Vol. 33, p. 238.) "Nov. 28, 1733," Moses Felt says he is 82 years old. (York County Records, Vol. 16, p. 75.) These it will be seen all point to 1650-1 as his natal year, and this seems to be also confirmed by his testimony that he "lived in Casco Bay about fourteen years before the Narragansett war broke out," evidently meaning that that was the time of his advent there, and we know this year, 1660, to be the time his father returned from Malden to his abandoned possessions at Casco Bay. Had the birth of this Moses occurred in 1641, he must have lived there subsequent to this time, for his parents were inhabitants from 1643 or earlier until their return to Malden before 1649. It might not be worth while to attempt the foregoing proof of Moses's birth, were it not for the fact that published statements exist which are at variance with the theory of the compiler as to the sometime existence of two Moses Felts, both the sons of the first George, though these statements, having been made long prior to his attempt to show this are not to be taken as disputing his theory, but rather as having been assumed without a thorough investigation of the facts.

We have already learned that Moses Felt lived at Casco Bay from about 1660. This is further proven by additional testimony of his own given May 10, 1733, in which he states that he "lived in Casco Bay at a place called North Yarmouth, from about 73 years since till drove thence by the Indians in the first Indian warr."

Perhaps at the time of this departure from North Yarmouth he had acquired no land of his own, for there seem to have been no ties of property to draw him back again. We learn that he lived seven years between the first and second Indian wars at Falmouth. Hon. William Willis, in his history of Portland, says he lived at Purpooduck. This was the point of land directly opposite Cleeves' Neck (now Portland), and within the limits of Falmouth. Possibly the 100 acres of land taken from the paternal possessions and given him by his father in 1684, was intended as an allurement to entice him back to that neighborhood. If so, it was successful, as the period of seven years which he passed at Falmouth expired in 1685, and we further learn from him that after the Narragansett war he "lived at s^d North Yarmouth at times Sundary years since, as an inhabitant being drove off by the Indians and returning again til about the year 1691."[1]

From 1675 until after 1756 the Indians were exceedingly troublesome to the settlements at Casco Bay. North Yarmouth was entirely deserted during King Philip's War and the inhabitants had hardly recovered from the ruin imposed upon them by this event, when King William's War broke out in 1688, causing a second flight of the settlers, and no further attempt was made to make it a place of habitation until 1713. In this interval of twenty-five years "the town had doubtless resumed much of the appearance of its original solitude." At the termination of this period the survivors and heirs began to return "to the ashes of their former habitations," a new saw-mill was erected, and the town slowly revived.

Moses Felt was undoubtedly discouraged by the futility of trying to maintain a peaceful residence at North Yarmouth; although retaining his ownership of property there, he did not again return to the place, but lived elsewhere at the Bay, perhaps eking out a hazardous existence at his old dwelling-place at Purpooduck, until about 1710, for we have his own statement that he was an inhabitant of Casco Bay for fifty years. In 1714 he is found to be a resident of Rumney Marsh, then a part of Boston, but now Chelsea, Mass. April 9th of this year he makes claim to "a Certain tract of Land lying & Being in ye Broad Cove in s^d North Yarmouth, with all of the Marsh in the head of s^d Broad Cove, butted & bounded as follows, viz: beginning at ye falls & so running by ye seaside till they Come to the Westernmost freshetts, as may appear by a deed of Sale for the Same s^d falls to Aaron Felt, having had a house on the Easternmost side of s^d falls & lived in it till the Enemy Drove him off." This is probably the 100-acre tract given him by his father, and we now learn that he had a house there which had been his residence. This claim, made at about the time of the resettlement of North Yarmouth, was evidently for the purpose of protecting his title to the property. In 1727 there were one hundred proprietors in the town of North Yarmouth; a redivision of lands was made this year; ten-acre lots were laid out, and the ancient proprietors were allowed to have lots at or near their old possessions. A committee to apportion and distribute the lots was appointed by the General Court. In this division Lot No. 57 fell to Moses Felt, while his nephew, George Felt 3d, had No. 56. "The settlement suffered much from the fact that many of the proprietors were not and did not intend to be inhabitants, and felt no common interest with the settlers for the welfare of the town."

March 20, 1727, Moses Felt and his nephew George conveyed to the Committee "the rights of George Felt Senior to land in North Yarmouth, excepting home lots of ten acres each granted to said Moses and George." This he says was the 300 acres originally bought of John Phillips, the Welshman, and repurchased of Sir Ferdinando Gorges. It included the 100 acres each which Moses, the son, and George, the grandson, had of George Senior.

Moses Felt's interest as a landed proprietor of North Yarmouth was now reduced to the 10-acre house-lot which had been granted by the Committee. March 8, 1728, he conveyed this to Phineas Jones of North Yarmouth, evidently retaining, however, the right to participate in such subsequent divisions of the common lands of the town as might be made.

After his removal from Casco Bay Moses Felt was generally known as "of Rumney Marsh," though between the years 1714 and 1733 we find him described in deeds as "of Boston" and "of Lynn" also. Until 1739 Rumney Marsh, now Chelsea, was a part of Boston. It is probable that after removing from Casco Bay he settled at Rumney Marsh, and after a few years purchased land in Lynn, in which town he then settled. As early as March 15, 1713-4, he bought of John Brintnall a lot in "Lynn Town Commons" and in this deed is described as "belonging to Boston." (Essex Land Records, 75-85.) June 13, 1716, he purchased another lot on the Commons of John Breed, and is called "now of Lynn." (Essex Land Records, 75-84.) Of this latter purchase he conveyed, a month later, one-half to John Atwell of Lynn and describes it as the lot "laid out to Lieutt John Breed on Lyn Town Comons, and is the fourth lot in ye Second Range in ye first Division called ye Six hundred Acres" (Essex Land Records, 49-118). It is probable that at this time he resided in Lynn on the "Six Hundred Acre Tract." This tract was the first division of public lands to the settlers, and was located in what is now the town of Saugus, in the northwest part thereof, west of the Saugus River and having the present towns of Melrose and Wakefield on its western border. In 1720 Moses Felt is again described as "of Boston" (Essex, 39-239), and in 1729 as "of Rumney Marsh in the Township of Boston" (Essex, 53-40). April 17, 1729, for a consideration of 150 pounds he conveyed to his son Joshua "all my lands lying & being in Boston afores^d and all my land scituate, Lying & being in Lyn . . with the Dwelling House" (Essex, 75-86). This was undoubtedly the ante-mortem settlement of his estate, and the conveyance of all his property to his eldest son, to the detriment of the interests of the younger son, Aaron, cannot now be explained unless upon the ground of an understanding that he was to be cared for by Joshua during the remainder of his life. Such an arrangement was not uncommon in those days, and in this case seems to be borne out by the fact that the only subsequent record we have of Moses' location, viz., in 1733, at which time he was 82 years old, places him in Lynn, the home of his son Joshua.

In addition to the conveyance of his real estate above mentioned, he deeded to Joshua "one full moiety or half part of all ye common Land That a Certain Ten Acre lot, scituate, Lying & Being in ye Town of Northyarmouth in ye County of York & Province afores^d, which I have conveyed & Confirmed to Phinehas Jones, shall Draw, & Ten acres I am to have out of said Phinehas Jones's part of Common Land drawed by said Ten acre lot & ye choice of ye Ten acres where he, ye s^d Joshua Felt his heirs or assigns pleases, in ye s^d part of Comon Land which will belong to ye s^d Phinehas Jones, or his heirs or assigns, when ye s^d town of Northyarmouth shall lay out their Common Land."

The latest mention we find of Moses Felt is in October, 1734, when he is taxed on the lot No. 57 at North Yarmouth, which he had parted with more than five years before. With this date he disappears from our knowledge.

In the establishment of claims to land in Casco Bay, Moses Felt was undoubtedly of much assistance; his early residence there, complete knowledge of the inhabitants and their affairs, and his evidently retentive memory, were made use of to a large extent in compiling evidence of titles, and his testimony is met with many times throughout the ancient records of York and Essex.

Not many incidents in the life of Moses Felt have been learned, but one or two are here set down as possessing interest to his descendants. Felt's Stream, so called, was upon the land formerly owned by George Felt, senior, and seems to have been of value as a water power. We are told that "Felt's Falls was where the brook at Cumberland Foreside comes tumbling into the sea." (Old Times, p. 562.) March 28, 1728, Moses Felt and his nephew George made a proposition[1] to the committee of North Yarmouth, that they might be granted Lot 52, through which this stream flowed, on the condition that they build a good grist mill thereon, but this proposition did not meet with the Committee's favor.

At another time we learn that Moses Felt had a dispute with his neighbor, Peter Blackman. Of its nature we are ignorant, but Peter took legal refuge and Moses was compelled to give bonds in the sum of 10 Pounds, with John York as surety, "to be of good behavior towards Peter Blackman and his family until next sessions of the Peace & then and there appear & answer what shall be alleged against him in the premises."

We know but little of his domestic relations. His wife does not join with him in any conveyances of land of which we have record. It is thought probable that she may have been Lydia Felt, the single mention of whom is found in Suffolk Land Records (33-55), which says: "July 22, 1718.—Lydia Felt, aged about 61 years (born 1657) testifieth and sayth that she lived a servant with Mr. Thomas Giles of Kennebec on his farm there for six years together and was there when his son Thomas was born, which was 48 years ago last June."

The date of Moses Felt's death is unknown, but it probably occurred at Rumney Marsh.

CHILDREN OF GEORGE AND PHILIPPA (ANDREWS) FELT. (4.)

George Felt, born ——[1] at Falmouth, died in Salem, February 24, 1729. He married Hannah Holmes, daughter of John and Hannah (Thatcher) Holmes of Salem. She was born June 25, 1667, and died in Salem, Dec. 29, 1693. He married (2d) February 27, 1695-6, Jemima (Bonfield) Luckes, widow of Oliver Luckes of Marblehead, and daughter of George and Rebecca (Bradstreet) Bonfield. She was baptized (with three others), Sept. 21, 1684, in the First Church of Marblehead, and died in 1748, and administration on her estate was granted to her son, Bonfield Felt, August 8th of that year. The estate inventoried £406:1:10. In his account, the administrator charges "board of the deceased from Aug. 30, 1744, to Dec. 30, 1747, at £60. £166:14:0. From then to February 28, 1748 [probably the date of her death], she being sick, at 40 shillings, per week, 16 pounds, old tenor."

George Felt remained at Casco Bay until about 1690, when with his brothers he returned to Salem. He was a block-maker by trade. July 4, 1693, he purchased in Salem[2] "A Certain Small tract or p^{cell} of Land lying and being situate in the Town of Salem afores^{d} be the same more or be it less, as it is, & Lyes Butted and bounded viz: Easterly by the highway leading to the river, Southerly by Land of Maj. [1] In Vol. XIII, page 72, of the Collections of the Essex Institute, will be found in "Inscriptions from Charter Street Burial Ground, Salem," the following: "George Felt, died Feb. 24, 1729, Aged 73." If this were correct it would make 1656 his natal year; an undoubted error, for his parents were not married until 1662. It is quite probable that the age as given on the tombstone has been incorrectly cut, or transcribed.

of Jno. Cromwell & Northerly by Land of David Phippen." This was conveyed to him by "Elias Stileman of the great Island in Portsmouth in the Province of New Hampshire in New England, Gent, For & in consideration of a Valuable Sum of fourteen pounds Ten Shillings, Lawfull money of New England." On this property he resided. His interest as a proprietor at Casco Bay did not cease by his return to Salem, and in addition to to the property received from his grandfather, and held by him there, we find him in 1714, March 30th, the purchaser from Benjamin Snelling of Boston of a parcel of land at Mussel Cove, Falmouth, "Within the late Province of Main." of 113 acres, "with all Bridges, ways, springs, Rivers & Commodities whatsoever to ye said tract or parcell of Land."[1] George Felt had a saw-mill on Mussel Cove Stream, which was operated by his son John, who seems to have lived in Falmouth and looked after his father's interests there.

March 20th, 1727, George and his Uncle Moses Felt, quit-claimed to the Proprietor's Committee of North Yarmouth, the 200 acres of land deeded them in 1684 by George Felt senior, as it was required in the re-distribution of lands at the re-settlement of the town at this time, and in place of his portion thus released George Felt received a house-lot of ten acres numbered 56 in the plat with all the rights thereto belonging.[2]

March 28, 1728, George and his Uncle Moses offered to build a mill upon Felt's stream, which flowed through Lot No. 52 of the new plat, in consideration of a deed of this lot from the Committee, but this offer was declined. (See foot note, page 35.) George Felt died in Salem and was interred in the Charter Street burial ground.

Administration on his estate was granted to his widow and son Bonfield, March 23, 1729.[3] The inventory included a house and a quarter of an acre of land, and amounted to the sum of £730:6:1. The property at Casco Bay does not appear. The estate was divided, one-third to the widow, two shares to Bonfield Felt, as the eldest son, and one share each to Benjamin, Mary, and Jemima, the other surviving children.

Samuel Felt, born probably at Falmouth. It is to be regretted that the destruction of many of the public records of that region leaves us without the means of ascertaining dates. Of Samuel Felt we have none, either of birth, marriage, or death. His wife's name was Elizabeth, and his eldest child was probably born in Falmouth. We first hear of him March 23, 1687–8, at which time he joined with his brothers George and Jonathan in a petition for confirmation of the ands given their father by their grandmother, Jane Mackworth. This petition is as follows:

[1] "To his Excelence Sir Edmond Andross. Kn^t, Captt Generall and Gouvernor in Chiefe in and over his Majesties Territorie and Dominion of New England.

About 1690 Samuel Felt left Casco Bay and with his brothers settled in Salem, where he remained until after 1701. He was a tailor and had a small house and shop on the main street of Salem. Dec. 30, 1701, he added to his possessions by a small purchase of land in the rear of his lot, which extended the same back to "Salem Commons."[1] This purchase was made for the sum of £4 of Mary Cheever, "Relict, widow, executrix to ye will & Testament of Peter Cheever late of Salem," and was a piece "Sixteen foot and Six Inches Broad." The home lot of Samuel Felt extended from Salem main street through in a northerly direction to the Commons, a distance of "ten Poles lacking Three foot," and of the width named above, and was bounded easterly and westerly by land owned by Samuel Hayward of Salem,[2] to whom, April 5, 1710, he sold it, together with the small house and shop thereon, for the sum of £30.

Sometime before 1703 Samuel Felt had become a resident of Rowley, where his mother, who had married Thomas Nelson, was living, and was an attendant at the First Church of that town. In the latter part of 1710 he lived in Byfield Parish. He died in Rowley and his family removed to Enfield, Conn., whither his sister, the wife of Josiah Wood, had already gone, and settled in the eastern part of the town, now Somers.

Jonathan Felt, born probably at Falmouth. March 23, 1687–8, he joined his brothers in a petition to Gov. Andros, as has already been related.

About 1690 he removed to Salem, and married there Jan. 3, 1695, Elizabeth Purchase of Marblehead. He was a blacksmith and "ankersmith." Aug. 19, 1700, he bought of Capt. Manasseh Marston of Salem his interest in a dwelling house and smith's shop for the sum of £30. This was in the vicinity of the present depot of the Eastern Railroad. His wife having died, he married (2d) before 1701, Elizabeth Blaney, daughter of John and Hannah (Ling) Blaney. He died in 1702, and administration on his estate was granted to his widow Oct. 13 of that year.[1]

The inventoried value of his estate was £187:10:2, and among the items were "one dwelling house with shopp" valued at 70 pounds, and "one negro girl" valued at 20 pounds. His widow was living in Byfield in 1708, and may have been the Elizabeth Felt, whose intentions of marriage with John Taylor, were published July 15, 1710.

CHILDREN OF MOSES FELT. (7).

Joseph Felt, born——. His intention of marriage to Sarah Mills, daughter of James and Martha (Alley) Mills of Lynn, was published Oct. 12, 1700. She was born Feb. 27, 1676. Joseph Felt was a weaver, carrying on that industry in connection with his farm. He lived at North Yarmouth on Broad Cove, on land which it is said he purchased of the Indians, but which it is more probable he claimed in right of his grandfather, George Felt, and which was located "convenient to go to William Scales' garrison." He was killed by the Indians in 1722 "near the shore between Richard Loring's and Alex Barr's farm," and his wife carried by them into captivity, in which state she remained nearly five years, suffering great hardships. It is related that one winter she became lost in the woods near Quebec and nearly perished before being found. She finally purchased her release by the expenditure of a large sum of money. Aug. 27, 1727, she petitioned the General Court for relief, in the following form. "A petition of Sarah Felt, Tamosin Ham & Ann Ham, showing that Joseph Felt, the Petitioner Sarah's husband was about five years since killed by the Indian Enemy at North Yarmouth within this Province, & she carried away by the said Indians & has undergone a miserable captivity in their hands, that the other petitioners were taken by the Indians about four years since & remained in their hands till very lately they obtained their Release at the Expense of several Hundreds of pounds & being reduced to very necessitous circumstances thereby, Therefore Praying the compassionate consideration and Relief of this Court by an allowance out of the Publick Treasury.—In the House of Representatives read & resolved that the Sum of Sixty Pounds be allowed & paid out of the publick Treasury to the petitioner Sarah Felt to enable her to reimburse the Charges arisen in obtaining her Redemption & getting home again." [1]

After her return from captivity the town of North Yarmouth was re-settled and the land there re-distributed to those who had any claim thereto. This took place in 1727, the "drawing" of the "Home-lots" of ten acres each being made on the 18th of May. In this distribution Lot number 49 fell to Mr. John Powell of Boston, but Mrs. Felt and her family laid claim to this property as that formerly owned by her husband. The Committee of Distribution denied her right thereto on the ground that Joseph Felt was a "squatter" and never held a valid title to the land in dispute, and advised Mr. Powell, who held the Committee's deed, to contest the matter, as shown by the following extract:—[2]

"May 25, 1728.—That whereas, the Home Lot of Land containing ten acres, No. 49 which by draft fell to Mr. John Powell of Boston, merch't, when the lots in said Town was drawn for May 18, 1727, as appears by the Town book; and since that time one Peter Wyer in behalf of Joseph Felt claimes ye said lot, altho' neither ye s^d Wyer nor Joseph Felt or any of Them have made out any Right or claim thereto unto us ye Committe appointed by ye General Court. We do therefore desire ye s^d Mr. Powell to take possession of the s^d Lot & if the s^d Wyer or any other person shall disturb molest or hinder his taking possession thereof, in such case we do fully impower & desire the said Mr. Powell to contest ye matter in the law to recover possession of the s^d lot until Definite sentence be given, at ye cost and charge of the whole community."

Whether Mr. Powell followed this advice or not we do not know, but evidently the family of Joseph Felt pursued the matter to a termination favorable to themselves, for we find the following resolution made by the Committee at a meeting held July 14, 1729:—[3]

"Whereas, Joseph Felt without liberty took up and built a house on a Piece of Land at Northyarmouth without having any right or Title thereto & was killed upon the Spot and his Family carried into Captivity, which said Land is since laid out into a Home Lot No. 49, which fell to Mr. John Powell when the Lots were drawn for, and Sarah Felt the widow of the said Joseph Felt, being returned from captivity, the Sub-committee are hereby directed to make some proposals of allowance to ye said widow, either in money or Land, in consideration of her Husband being killed there &c., upon her and her heirs quitting all Pretenses to the said Lots & Lands adjoyning to which her said Husband built and settled upon as afores^d^, and to remit the same to the Committee for their consent & approbation."

The proposition made by the sub-committee as directed resulted finally in the following agreement:—[1]

"Aug. 23, 1731.—Agreed and voted that Sarah Felt widow of Joseph Felt deceased, in consideration that her husband was killed by the Indians & she carried into captivity, shall have 50 acres of land laid out and granted to her, her heirs and assigns forever, in or near the place where tis now proposed near the corn mill & fronting Royals River, or in some other suitable place in said Town where it may be less preludicial to the proprietors. All necessary roads and highways to be laid through it, allowing her so much land as the roads may take up, upon condition that the said Sarah Felt & her heirs shall give a release or quitclaim to all their claim & pretensions to the home lot No. 49 & the land adjoining, agreeable & according to the votes of the Committee July 14, 1729, but not otherwise."

This settlement appears to have been satisfactory to Sarah Felt, and eventually, viz.: Aug. 7, 1733, she conveyed all her interest in Lot No. 49 to the Committee, and the Committee deeded to her and her heirs "50 acres lying and being on the southwest side of Royall's River." (Appendix B.)

On the 26th day of February, 1738, Sarah Felt was admitted to the membership of the Church in North Yarmouth, in which town she remained a resident until her death, which occurred Jan. 3, 1768.

Joshua Felt, born probably at Casco Bay, and when his father removed to Rumney Marsh went with him. He married, Jan. 15, 1712, Anne Walcott of Salem. In the record of this marriage he is described as "of Boston," probably residing in Rumney Marsh, which was then a part of that town. He was a cooper by trade. He acquired considerable land in the "Six Hundred Acre Division" of Lynn. Dec. 25, 1724, he bought of Joseph Ramsdell for £2 10*s*., "Y^e^ Second Lot in the Second Range in ye first Division called ye Six hundred acres." This was the lot originally laid out to Priscilla Kirtland, and contained one acre and fifty poles.[1] He evidently removed at this time and settled upon this purchase. May 15, 1727, he purchased of a committee of the Town of Reading for the sum of £8 "all Readings right to a parcell of land in the Township of Lynn . . . & Lyeth in a Tract of Land that is called by the name of the Six hundred acres, & it is six acres by measure & Lyeth near said Felts House, and is bounded Southwardly by s^d Joshua Felts own land, Easterly by the high Way that leads to Lyn, Northerly by the Range Line, Westerly by Boston Line."[2] This was the first lot in the second range, and adjoined his first purchase. May 16, 1729, he added still further to his Lynn property by the purchase of another lot on Lynn Commons, "the last lot (save one) in ye First Range in ye First Division called ye six hundred acres."[3] This contained about one acre and cost forty shillings. March 9, 1732, he bought of John Parrish of Lynn five lots, for which he paid the sum of £188.[4] Portions of this property he afterwards disposed of to various persons, one of them being his brother Aaron.[5]

His first wife having died he married (2d) June 16, 1736, Mrs. Dorcas (Gould) Buxton, widow of Anthony Buxton of Salem. There were no children by this marriage. The date of Joseph Felt's death is unknown, but he was living in March, 1744. The date of his wife's will is Jan. 13, 1746–7, at which time she was a widow.[6]

dent of Lynn, and purchased of his brother Joshua a lot of nine acres in the "Six hundred Acre Division," which is described as being "in Lynn and Boston," for £160, April 12, 1737.[1] Aaron Felt was a husbandman and cooper. He married Dec. 25, 1739, Mary Wyatt of Lynn. She died after 1760, and he married (2d) Jan. 22, 1765, Hannah Atwell. Shortly after this time he removed to Andover, Mass., but in 1769 was back again in Lynn, and March 20 of that year bought land there "running 40 Rod by Chelsey Line."[2] Administration on his estate was granted his son Aaron, Sept. 5, 1769.[3] Nov. 25, 1771, his administrator was empowered by the "Great and General Court" "to make Sail of all the Rail Estate of his Hon[d] father, Aaron Felt, Late of Lynn."[4]

John Felt, baptized at Salem, May 14, 1699. He appears to have lived at Falmouth, having an oversight of his father's property there. We hear of him in 1718 in a deposition made by Thomas Stephens and Margaret Felt, in which they say they were well acquainted "with George Felt's land in Casco Bay in a place known by the name of Muscle Cove Streame, and to our certain knowledge s^d^ Felt had on s^d^ land one dwelling House & John Felt lived in s^d^ House in the year 1718, and there was also a Saw-Mill belonging to said George Felt in s^d^ year 1718 on s^d^ Muscle Cove Stream and that John Felt tended said Saw Mill for his father George Felt's acco^tt^ wth out any Molestation from any persons whatsoever until the Indians broke out & destroyd ye dwelling House and Saw Mill as we Informed. Witness our hands the 26th March 1729. Thomas Stephens having since seen the ruins of s^d^ House and Saw Mill."[1] Also by deposition of Jonathan Ashby, who "Saith Thatt he being well acquainted att falmouth In Casco Bay and Thatt for a bout Ten or Leuen years past Mr George felt and Mr Sam^ll^ Bucknam had a Saw Mill or Mills on Mussell Cove Stream and Thatt Mr felts Son John Felt Did att Times Tend The Mill and had a small hows on the North Easterly Side of The Mill or Stream and did clear and fence In a feald Butt In Time the mill was partly burntt and the Hows."[2]

Feb. 1, 1719–20, a town meeting in Falmouth granted to John East "A Lott of Land on Little Clapboard Island not exceeding fourty acres so that it may be found on said Island no ways prejudicial to any former grants or Just Rights."[3] Capt. Ben. Larraby and John Felt dissented to this vote, the latter probably on the ground of his interest in the land through his grandfather, to whom it was given by the town.

March 13, 1721–2, at a meeting for choosing town officers, etc., it was "Voted,— that John Felt should be constable for the year ensuing, and he was sworne as such."[4]

In the early days of which this record treats the ocean was the great highway from one point to another, especially for those living along the coast, and there were probably but few who were not familiar with the sailor's vocation. It is not surprising, therefore, to find John Felt in command of a vessel in 1724, though hitherto we have had no hint of him in that occupation. His death occurred April 25, 1724, and we quote from a local history[1] an account of that event:

"In the Spring of 1724 the Indians were early at their terrible work. . . . In April a sloop belonging to Lynn, under the command of Capt. John Felt, came into the Kennebunk River after lumber and spars to be taken at the mill on Gooch's Creek. As stated in the History of Kennebunkport,[2] he engaged two young men, William Wormwood and Ebenezer Lewis, soldiers stationed at Harding's Garrison, to assist him. The spars were afloat, and Felt was on the raft; the bank on the north side of the river was thickly covered with trees. Here a party of Indians had concealed themselves, awaiting favorable opportunity to attack the crew. The first intimation that the latter had of their presence was the discharge of a gun killing Capt. Felt. Lewis immediately ran to the mill brow, where he was also killed by a ball striking him on the head. Wormwood ran, pursued by the enemy; finding himself likely to be overtaken, and, fearing Indian captivity more than death, he placed his back against a stump and defended himself with the butt of his gun until the bullets of the enemy had deprived him of life. These men, it is said, were buried in the field near Butland's Rocks, where Felt's gravestones were standing till within the present century."

Administration on the estate of John Felt was granted his father, May 11, 1724.[3]

We have not the record of her death, but she was living in June, 1759. Bonfield Felt married (2d) Sept. 23, 1762, Mary Bacon. He was appointed joint administrator with Substantially the same account is given in Bradbury's History of Kennebunkport, on pp. 115–6. Bradbury adds "The mill was near where the bridge crosses the creek. It stood fifteen years. The remains of the dam are yet to be seen." (1837.)

[2] Dr. Browne says, "This event is strangely perverted in Hutchinson's History of Massachusetts, where it is said, 'About the same time John Felt, William Wormwood, and Ebenezer Lewis were killed at a sawmill on Kennebec River.' The same perverted account has since found its way into various histories of the Indian wars."

Zerah Kibbee, who died in Somers, July 24, 1745. He married (2d) Feb. 27, 1746, widow Elizabeth Bement, who died Nov. 16, 1784. Samuel Felt settled in Somers not far from 1720. He emigrated thither from Salem when such a journey must have been made on foot or horseback through a wilderness in which lurked dangers from savage beasts and still more savage men. We find that a number of Salem families settled early in Somers, among them that of Josiah Wood, who had married an aunt of Samuel Felt, and this was undoubtedly the inducement that drew him thither,— an enterprise that was soon followed by the remaining members of his father's family. It is related of Samuel that his first appearance in Somers was upon a sorrel mare, clad in a suit of yellow-brown homespun. As he stopped before the tavern kept by Zerah Kibbee, he attracted the attention of a young girl who stood in the doorway, who, under the excitement of seeing a good-looking young stranger with fair locks, exclaimed to her mother, "Yellow man, yellow mare, yellow coat, yellow hair." She afterwards became his wife and the mother of his children. Samuel Felt served in the French and Indian War, and bore the title of captain to his dying day. He became a considerable land-owner in Somers, having a valuable farm stretching along the highway, now the "street" of Somers His house was on the corner of the road leading north past the old meeting-house, and, after his son Samuel married, he shared it with him. He was a "joyner" as well as a farmer, and a man prominent and useful in the community. Samuel Felt and his wife united with the church in Somers, May 21, 1727, upon the occasion of the first sacrament of this new church, and to the end of the ninety years of his life he bore the reputation of a righteous and God-fearing man. He died in Somers, March 23, 1788.

Joseph Felt, baptized in Salem First Church, July 20, 1701. He early removed to Enfield, Conn., and settled in the eastern part of the town (now Somers), and became a land-owner there in 1723. March 19 of this year, "Y^e 9th year of our Lord, King George," he bought from James Wood, probably his cousin, for a consideration of £30, a tract containing fourteen acres, "bounded westerly on land of Samuel Felt (his brother), northerly on common land, and easterly on the road or highway leading from the road that leads from Enfield to Woodstock away over the Greate Brook towards Springfield; southerly pointing down to the road y^t Leads from Enfield afores^d to a heap of stones & ye norwest corner, and runs easterly according to the platt of Woods farm, formerly Torrys." [1] Whether he ever lived on this spot we do not know, but subsequently his residence was farther north, where he had a farm of sixty acres, east of the meeting-house on the northerly end of Bald Mountain, [2] which, after his removal to Springfield, he sold to Charles Pynchon of that town for a consideration of £160 10*s.*

While an early resident of Somers he rendered military service (which we do not know the occasion of, unless it was some Indian alarm) under Col. Samuel Partridge and Capt. Stephen Richards, from July 24 to Sept. 11, 1722, and drew pay amounting to £3 11*s.* 5*d.* [3]

He married Aug. 10, 1736, Hannah Bigbe of Somers. Joseph Felt was a farmer, to which occupation he added the trade of a wheelwright. In 1763 he removed with his family to Springfield, Mass., and settled in that portion of the town located west of the Connecticut River, which eleven years later was incorporated as the town of West Springfield. Here he bought of Nathaniel Warriner (April 26, 1763) two tracts of land: one of forty acres lying in the bend of the river near the "Great Falls,"— upon which the city of Holyoke now stands,— and another of fifteen acres lying on the west side of the county road leading to Northampton.[1] Dec. 28 of the same year he bought of Thomas Miller, 2d, for £23, another tract upon the west side of the highway,[2] probably adjoining his previous purchase. This was undoubtedly his homestead, and was a little north of the present village of Ashleyville. The former piece, upon the river, he conveyed to his son Solomon, the deed being dated Dec. 29, 1769. Joseph Felt died about 1780. We find no record of the event nor of the administration of his estate, but his son Solomon conveyed, April 25, 1783, to his brother Joseph the two home lots which had belonged to his "late father."[3] We do not know when the death of Joseph Felt's wife occurred. The records of West Springfield are silent upon the subject, and the four cemeteries of the town contain no headstones bearing the name of Felt. All the children were born in Somers.

March 9, 1788, his brother Joseph deeded to him a house lot of ten acres and buildings at "Tattum," in West Springfield on the north side of the County road and west of land belonging to his mother. (Hampshire Deeds, 29-288.) March 16, 1797, he conveyed the above land back to his brother. We can find no children of this marriage, though it is probable there were some. The records of births, marriages, and deaths were not fully kept during the Revolutionary War, and on this account much material for genealogical purposes has been lost.

May 23, 1739, he purchased of his cousin James Wood £40 worth of land. Aug. 9, 1746, his brother-in-law, Ebenezer Buck, deeded to him a lot of land in consideration of £400. We learn that in 1739, Phineas Felt was a sealer of leather, and in 1746, a tythingman. By trade he was a shoemaker. The date of his death is unknown, but the latest date at which we hear of him is June 7, 1749, when he deeds land to widow Mary Bond of Southborough, Mass.

[2] The following account of Joseph Weare is adapted from the Portland Transcript of June 24, 1876, re-published in Old Times at North Yarmouth: "Joseph Weare, the famous Indian scout, lived over a century ago at North Yarmouth. Weare's hostility to the Indians was caused by their having killed the husband of his sister under circumstances of great and unusual cruelty.

"Weare was once at Lewiston Falls where a large war party of hostile Indians had collected, and were having fine sport paddling their canoes far up the stream and then drifting with the rapid current down to the head of the falls, at which point they had a bonfire to warn them how far they might descend in safety. Weare waited until the Indians had gone up the river, then emerged from his covert and extinguished the fire, building another below the cataract, in a tree, at a height corresponding with the one built by the Indians, which deceived them so much that their canoes were in the rapids and beyond control ere they realized their danger, and they swept on over the falls to death and destruction.

"On another occasion Weare was splitting rails near his home, when six Indians approached him and asked if he could tell them where 'Joe Weare'

When Joe had driven in his wedge and had the log well opened, he asked the Indians to help him by pulling on each side as he drove the wedge. To this the party agreed and took hold, three on each side with their fingers in the crack of the log; when Joe, by a dexterous blow of his axe, knocked out the wedge, causing the seam to close like a vise upon their hands, and leaving them at the mercy of their terrible enemy, who, as he gave each a death-blow with his axe, shouted in the ears of his victims, 'I'm Joe Weare, d—n you, I'm Joe Weare.' His hostility toward the Indians never abated. He swore to kill one for every drop of blood they drew from the veins of his brother-in-law, and his name was a terror to the red men far and wide. It is rumored that he removed to the Black River country in Jefferson County, N. Y., but this is probably not a fact. Some of his children lived in that section, but he probably died in Packersfield.

Samuel Felt (3d), born at Somers, Conn., April 13, 1735; died at Lebanon, N. Y., July 31, 1803. He married in Somers, Nov. 22, 1761, Mehitabel Buell, daughter of Joseph and Anna Submit (Colton) Buell of Somers. She was born in Somers, July 6, 1743, and died in Lebanon, N. Y., Aug. 16, 1794. He married (2d) Mercy ——, who died in Lebanon, March 13, 1819, aged 72.

Samuel Felt served as a soldier in the French and Indian War, and in the War of the Revolution took an active part. He was commissioned by Governor Trumbull as an ensign in the Colonial Army March 3, 1775, and May 15 of the same year was promoted to be a second lieutenant. The early service of the Revolution was intermittent, enlistments being usually for a short time to cover an emergency, and after it was over the soldiers returned home until further necessity required the enlistment of an additional force. We find Samuel Felt in 1775, under authority of Governor Trumbull, dated June 10, filling the office of constable and collector in Somers, and Dec. 21, 1776, he was commissioned first lieutenant in the Army of the New Republic. Probably his service from this time was continuous to the end of the war, for we have the authority of his daughter for saying that he served through the war, also that he became a captain and was called by this title as long as he lived. An incident of romantic interest may here be related, showing that the channel through which the stream of love winds its way is sometimes beset with dangers. Mehitabel Buell was promised in marriage to a young man of Somers, who, in the pride of his love, introduced the object of his affections to his long-time friend, Samuel Felt. "To see her was to love her" with Samuel, and in the light of his superior attractions her love for her former admirer paled and died out. So she married Samuel, and the deserted swain was left lamenting. It may be superfluous to add that the relations hitherto existing between the two young men became somewhat strained by this action, and they came to regard, each the other, as a bitter enemy. Many years later, during the days when our troops were compelled to evacuate New York in mad haste, the deserted lover, a member of the patriot army, overdone by his exertions to escape, lay prone upon the ground. His disappointment had not reduced him to a skeleton as it should have done, but, according to the tradition, he was in fine form and bore the weight of his 300 pounds with becoming grace. Samuel Felt was a tall, spare man, built for strength, and when in turn he passed in the retreat and espied his enemy prostrate, a sense of the wrong he had done him awakened in his conscience, and he bore him upon his shoulders for three miles to a place of safety. For this act of humanity the old feud was forgotten and the old friendship revived, which was not again broken.

After his marriage Samuel Felt purchased of his father for the sum of £200 (May 9, 1763) a farm of seventy acres extending along Somers "street" a distance of 160 rods. This adjoined a parcel already owned by him and formed the farm which he cultivated. He lived with his family in the same house with his father, located probably on the east corner of the highway leading north from Somers street past the old meeting-house, though maintaining a separate family establishment until the death of his stepmother in 1784.

The years which followed the Revolutionary War were years of poverty and hardship to the farming communities of America. Money was scarce and its value depreciated; taxes were excessive, and many a man who had always maintained his family in comfort found ruin staring him in the face. Samuel Felt was of this number, and about the year 1793, his father having died five years before, he determined to strike out anew, and after a prospecting tour with his son David, secured a tract of 500 acres in the heart of the New York wilderness, on the banks of the Chenango River, in the present Township of Lebanon, Madison County. Here they cleared a small patch of land, raised a crop of potatoes and Indian corn, erected a double log-house with huge stone chimney in the center, and returned to the valley of the Connecticut for their families.

The journey to the new settlement was one of hardships. The mother, feeble and in ill-health, rode upon a sled drawn by oxen, upon which was packed their household goods. The two elder sons were married, and the combined families numbered eighteen souls. The journey occupied three weeks, and west of Albany was through an almost unbroken forest, which became a trackless wilderness ere their destination was reached. The streams were unbridged, and a recent thaw and consequent freshet rendered traveling perilous. In this new home Samuel Felt and his sons commenced anew their battle with the world. The nearest mill was at Utica, forty miles away, and their corn must be carried there on horseback to be ground. As the summer came on and the crops were safely planted, Samuel Felt started on horseback for his old home to settle up his affairs there. The journey must occupy at least six weeks. The invalid wife was better, and the time for this necessary undertaking seemed auspicious; but he had been gone but a few days when she was seized with apoplexy and died, and he returned in due time to find her grave in a bend of the river,—the first grave in the town of Lebanon. Here, where Samuel Felt found the unbroken wilderness, are fair and cultivated farms, and from this spot on the banks of the Chenango have sprung a race, now scattered throughout the States of the Union, who may well revert with pride to the fearless courage and indomitable will of their ancestor, who commenced anew the battle of life when almost sixty years of age, and by his untiring energy caused "the wilderness and the solitary place to blossom as the rose."

Solomon Felt, born in Somers, Conn., Dec. 7, 1748. He removed with his father's family to West Springfield, Mass., in 1763. Feb. 6, 1781, he was appointed guardian of his youngest brother, Jonathan. His name appears a number of times in the land records of Hampshire County. He possessed land in the "Outward Commons" of West Springfield, one piece of which he bought of Obadiah Miller for "18 bushels of good wheat." In 1779 he served in the Revolutionary Army as a private under Captain Preferred Leonard. "Continental service done at New London in the State of Connecticut," from July 28, to Sept. 2, for which he drew as pay £15 16*s.* 8*d.*, which included "5 days in which to return home at 20 miles per day."

While no record of Solomon Felt's marriage has been found, there is a possibility that he married widow Mary Bagg, and died not long after that event. May 6, 1783, he purchased of Medad Pomeroy land in Northampton for which he paid £100, and August 22d of the same year he conveyed the land to his brother Joseph. In both of these deeds he is described as "of Northampton," though in all previous conveyances as "of West Springfield." He probably died not long after this latter date, as his name does not again appear.

Widow Mary Felt lived for many years in a little house on the west side of the highway a little north of the meeting-house in West Springfield. She was famous as a cook, and her house was the resort of many of the young people of the neighborhood for a "good time." She died in West Springfield, Feb. 16, 1830, aged 87 years.

Lemuel Felt, born in Somers, Oct. 19, 1756. The family removed to West Springfield when he was about seven years old. Like many of the family, he was patriotic and served his country during the Revolutionary War. When troops were raised in May, 1776, for the "Defence of the Town and Harbour of Boston" he enlisted in the service. In November of this year we find him in Col. Josiah Whitney's Regiment under Capt. Josiah Smith. December 25, 1776, he enlisted in Capt. Nathan Rowlie's Company in "a detachment of Regiments from Hampshire County" and served at Ticonderoga until April 3, 1777. He also served during the same year, from Aug. 24, to Nov. 29, in the "Northern Department," under Col. Ruggles Woodbridge and Capt. John Morgan, and in 1778 served for three months under Capt. Phineas Stebbins, in Col. Nathan Sparhawk's Regiment. He married in January, 1781, Abigail Miller of West Springfield. She was born in April, 1754, and died in March, 1797. He married (2d) Sept. 27, 1797, Mrs. Mary (Bagg) Eldredge, widow of Anna Eldredge (by whom she had one son, Lyman Eldredge, born June 19, 1792). She was born Aug. 16, 1762, and died May 1, 1824.

October 5, 1797, Lemuel Felt mortgaged to Jedediah Day, "one certain tract of land lying in West Springfield in the outward Commons so called, containing one hundred acres be the same more or less, being part of the twentieth lot and part of the twenty-first lot in said Commons, bounded southwardly on Caleb Humeston, northwardly on Josiah Rogers, eastwardly on Amos Allen, and westwardly on Thomas Howard, with all the buildings standing thereon, and being the same whereon and in which I now dwell."

Lemuel Felt was a farmer, and died in West Springfield, March 23, 1837.

Joseph Felt, born in Somers, Sept. 15, 1758. His intentions of marriage to Sarah Hills of Enfield, Conn., were published Sept. 28, 1782. She was the daughter of Jacob and Love (Pease) Hills, and was born in Enfield, Oct. 14, 1765. At this time he had been a resident of West Springfield nineteen years. He served in the Revolutionary War in Col. David Leonard's regiment, under Capt. John Morgan, from March 6 to April 10, 1778, at Ticonderoga, and during the same year served in Capt. Phineas Stebbins's company in Col. Nathan Sparhawk's regiment twenty days from Sept. 28. His name was borne on the pension rolls at Washington. April 25, 1783, his brother, Solomon, conveyed to him two pieces of land in West Springfield, on the west side of the highway, a little north of what is now the village of Ashleyville, this being the homestead of his late father. Oct. 30, 1792, he conveyed this property to Nathan Stevens of Waterbury, Conn., and describes it as containing eighty acres, and "being the whole of the 26th lot in number in the outward commons." For this he received the sum of £160. Joseph Felt separated from his wife and wandered off, but afterwards returned and lived with his daughter Louisa until his death, which occurred Sept. 14, 1849, at the age of 91 years. His wife, Sarah Felt, became a member of the West Springfield Church in 1823.

Jonathan Felt, born in Somers, Aug. 4, 1762. He removed with his father's family to West Springfield, where his intentions of marriage to Jemima Allen were published July 18, 1784. We have been unable to gain a full account of Jonathan Felt and his family. He enlisted in 1778 in the First Hamsphire Regiment, "raised in compliance with the Resolve of Court of the 22nd of June, 1778, to Reinforce the Continental Army for the space of three months." He is described on the roll as 18 years of age, five feet ten inches in stature, with dark hair and complexion and blue eyes, and by trade a blacksmith. He served another three months' term in the army in 1780 in Col. Murray's regiment, under Capt. Joseph Browning. Feb. 6, 1781, his elder brother, Solomon, was appointed his guardian, presumably on account of the distribution of his father's estate at this time. Jan. 26, 1796, Jonathan Felt and Jemima, his wife, conveyed to Bishop Allen a lot of six and one-half acres on the west side of the county road in the North Parish of West Springfield, "on which I now dwell," and about this time moved to Leverett, Mass., where, in 1797, he had a farm of fifty-three acres "on the town road." We learn nothing more of Jonathan Felt, but his wife died in Leverett, Dec. 3, 1852, aged 91 years. It is said that he had fourteen children; we know the names of but seven and are able to trace the descendants of but two of these.

CHILDREN OF JONATHAN AND HANNAH (SILSBEE) FELT. (40.)

Jonathan Felt, born in Salem, Mass. Died before 1761. He married July 18, 1744, Sarah Reeves, daughter of William and Sarah (Fountaine) Reeves of Salem. She was baptized in the First Church, Marblehead, Aug. 26, 1722. Administration on her estate was granted her daughter Mehitabel April 3, 1787. Jonathan Felt was a fisherman. His homestead was located on the south side of the main street in Salem.

CHILDREN.

305. I. MEHITABEL, b. ——. She was appointed administratrix of her mother's estate April 3, 1787. June 27 of this year she deeded the "Mansion house," the property of her mother, to Samuel Holman of Salem, who at once completed the transfer by conveying it back to her. This would intimate that at this time she was the only remaining heir. She married May 31, 1793, Samuel Beckford, son of John and Rebecca (Ruck) Beckford of Salem, who was baptized in Salem Tabernacle, Feb. 6, 1774. At the time of her death she was a widow, and administration on her estate was granted to Abner Chase, April 17, 1810.

306. II. HANNAH, bap. June 7, 1752. She is said to have married a Reeves, and probably died before 1787.

307. III. JONATHAN, b. 1754; m. July 4, 1776, Rebecca Barnet. He served in the Revolutionary War in the Salem Company commanded by Capt. Benjamin Ward, and was taken prisoner in 1777. In 1780 he was in service on the Privateer brig Cutter, Samuel Covill, master. He probably died before 1787. We know of no children.

132.

John Felt, born ——; married Jan. 1, 1750-1, Deborah Skerry, daughter of Ephraim and Margaret (Silsbee) Skerry. She died ——, and he married (2d) May 19, 1757, Mrs. Catherine Turner, widow of John Turner, Jr., and daughter of John and Catharine (Manning) Berry. She was born June 21, 1730, and died probably in 1803. Her will is dated July 18, 1801, and was probated in 1803. John Felt died of a cancer, in Danvers, Mass., in August, 1785, and administration on his estate was granted to Capt. Richard Manning, June 7, 1786, who gave bonds, with John Felt and Edward Brown (son and son-in-law of Capt. John Felt) as sureties. The inventory of his personal estate showed property amounting to £2,568 13*s.* 5*d.*, and of real estate £2,201 0*s.* 0*d.*

John Felt purchased, May 10, 1757, just previous to his second marriage, a house and lot on Lynde Street in Salem and subsequently became the owner of a large amount of land in the "North Fields," a locality beyond the North River, and now known as North Salem. Felt Street in that section of the present City of Salem was laid out through his property. John Felt was a "shoreman" or owner of vessels trading coastwise. He was also skilled in the trade of a cordwainer or shoemaker, and later became a merchant, having a warehouse near the North Bridge, and probably trading in West India goods and the like.

December 20, 1764, he purchased half of a pew in "The Great Meeting House" in Salem—a floor pew "having ye Alley nearest ye Easternmost Door of s^d^ House on the East side of it." In 1768 we hear of him as chosen to the office of "fence surveyor" and "surveyor of weighing." He bore the military title of Captain, having commanded an artillery company of the Salem militia.

At the opening of the Revolutionary War Capt. Felt resided in the North Fields, a communal settlement composed of farmers, who, while under the jurisdiction of the Salem laws to a certain extent, were in some degree an independent community. Capt. Felt's father, Jonathan Felt, was the owner of lands in this locality, and as a successor to this estate he added largely to it by subsequent purchases. He also succeeded to lands there through his first wife, formerly owned by her father, Ephraim Skerry. We find the estate of John Felt bounded easterly upon the North River and westerly upon the highway leading to "ye new mills" (so called) in Danvers,- a large possession.

Captain Felt was a tall, muscular, well-made man, and endowed with the courage of his convictions, one who in an emergency proves to be the right man in the right place. This was well shown at the time of the British invasion of Salem by Col. Leslie, Feb. 26, 1775, when, by the firm stand taken by Capt. Felt, the opening conflict of the Revolution (which was precipitated seven weeks later at Concord) was here averted. Had a man of less firmness and weaker judgment stood in his place, in all probability the first battle of the war would have been fought at the North Bridge in Salem. It may not be inadmissible to relate briefly a history of the events of this time, chiefly with a bearing upon the part taken by Capt. Felt, and the following account is drawn largely from a very interesting address delivered by Charles M. Endicott, Esq., January 18, 1855, before the Essex Institute of Salem.

The bridge over the North River and the causeway over the flats were built by the town of Salem in 1744. Their combined length was 860 feet, with a width of 18 feet, and over the river was a draw at least 18 feet long, which was arranged to swing upward for the passage of vessels. The town's right in the bridge and flats was, by authorization of a vote in town meeting, held May 14, 1755, conveyed by the selectmen to certain citizens, (the right to the draw and its supporting piers being reserved,) upon condition that the bridge and way be always kept in suitable condition for the passage of vehicles of every description, and this failing, the property, with all improvements which might have been made, to revert to the town. The rights conveyed were, after a time, forfeited, and the town being again in possession appointed a committee to make a further conveyance. This was done June 15, 1768, and Jonathan Ropes, Jeremiah Hacker, Thorndike Proctor, and John Felt, all proprietors in the North Fields, became the owners of the bridge and adjacent flats under the same restrictions as governed the former proprietors. (See Appendix C.) This was the condition of things at the opening of the Revolutionary War.

As before intimated, Capt. John Felt was a prominent figure at the time of Leslie's invasion. Mr. Endicott says: "Foremost among the friends of liberty, and the resolute and daring enemies of oppression and arbitrary power, stood Capt. John Felt, who, without any disparagement to others, appears entitled to the distinction of the Hero of the British repulse at the North Field Bridge. He was at this time about fifty years of age. His frame, square, strong and muscular, denoted him a man whom it would be the part of prudence to avoid in single combat. Salem possessed many men whose social position in life was perhaps superior, men of more wealth, of more erudition, of more influence in her public councils; but none of greater moral worth, or irreproachable private character. His love of independence and hatred of tyranny had shone through his whole life, and with these qualities was blended the most intrepid resolution. There lived no one in whose heart glowed a warmer love for the liberties of his country, and none more ready to peril, and if need be to sacrifice, his life in support of her cause. In a word, he was just the man for an emergency: of cool, determined bravery, calm and collected in the hour of danger. These qualities inspired every one with confidence in his ability successfully to control and direct any daring enterprise or forlorn hope which his inclination prompted him to lead."

The object of the invasion by Col. Leslie was to take possession of a dozen or more cannon which had been collected by the citizens for the purpose of resisting British aggression should occasion require, and which were secreted about the premises of Capt. Robert Foster, a blacksmith, who had been employed in repairing them, on the north side of the North River.

Col. Leslie landed his forces in a retired spot on Marblehead Neck and marched swiftly and secretly towards Salem; but the news of his movements had preceded him, and when he arrived he found the draw of the bridge open, and guarded by a large number of citizens massed upon the north shore. As he passed the Court House he was joined by Capt. John Felt, who attached himself closely to Col. Leslie, with the avowed intention of making things hot for him personally should he order a commencement of hostilities. He afterwards stated that it was his intention to grapple with Col. Leslie, had the troops fired upon the people, and to jump with him into the stream, there to try the death struggle together. A neighbor afterwards said, "He could have done so, drowned him, and then swam off."

Col. Leslie, upon finding the draw open, demanded that it be immediately lowered, and remonstrated with the people for insulting his soldiers and obstructing the King's highway. "This is not the King's highway," was the reply, "it is a private way belonging to the proprietors of the North Fields, and no King or country has any control over it."

"The people on the north side of the bridge had climbed upon the top of the upraised leaf by help of the chains, and there sat astride like so many hens at roost. The indignation of the Colonel at having his designs thus suddenly and unexpectedly baffled, was excited almost to frenzy, and he gave utterance to his feeling, to say the least, in no mild or becoming language; one account says he stamped and swore, ordering the bridge to be immediately lowered. Being questioned as to his design in making this movement, and why he wished to cross the bridge, he replied that he had orders to cross it, and he would do so if it cost his life and the lives of his men. Here was, however, a dilemma from which this bravado could not relieve him. To advance under the present circumstances without the consent of the inhabitants was impossible, and to retreat, disgrace. In the bitterness of his feelings he then went upon West's (now Brown's) wharf, to reconnoitre, closely followed by Capt. Felt, who was observing every motion and order with the keen unremitting watchfulness of the tiger, and turning to an officer near him, said, 'You must face about this division, and fire upon those people.' These were the inhabitants on the northern side of the river, who had collected upon a small wharf which jutted out from the eastern side of the bridge, conspicuous among whom was Capt. Robert Foster, the owner of the premises upon which the cannon had been deposited. This order to fire having been overheard by Capt. Felt, who stood within two yards of Col. Leslie, he cried out with a loud voice, for his resentment was kindled by the order to fire: 'Fire! you have no right to fire without further orders; if you do fire you will all be dead men.' 'Where are they who can hinder me?' asked Col. Leslie. 'There,' said Capt. Felt, pointing to the people, 'is a multitude, every man of whom is prepared to die in this strife.'

"At the moment these words were uttered by Capt. Felt, a thrill of confidence was felt through the whole multitude. The people saw at once that he was just the man for the present emergency, and with unanimous, though tacit, consent, looked to him as their leader in any movement which should be made for the further defense of the bridge. He was the spirit on whom the crowd now depended. How far such language induced Col. Leslie to use a praiseworthy forbearance cannot be determined; but had the command to fire been enforced, probably not a man of that whole regiment would have escaped death, and the first bloody battle of the Revolution would have been fought at the North Bridge, on the 26th of February, instead of the 19th of April, at Lexington."

It was now low tide, and three gondolas lay aground on the west side of the bridge; one of them was owned by Capt. Felt, and one by his brother Jonathan, commonly known as "Hunter Felt." Apprehensive that they might be seized by the soldiers, Capt. Felt suggested their destruction; and the citizens, conspicuous among them being Jonathan Felt, sprang to the work, and in a few moments, by the use of axes and such other implements as were found ready at hand, the work was accomplished, but not without resistance, and in the fracas which followed one Joseph Whicher received a prick in the breast from a bayonet sufficient to draw blood, which may be justly recorded as "the first blood of the Revolution."

Col. Leslie having by this time become convinced of the determination of the citizens to resist his progress, announced his intention of carrying out his purpose if he remained until autumn, and was assured by Capt. Felt that nobody would care if he did so.

Upwards of an hour and a half had been consumed in the fruitless attempt to cross the bridge, and the short winter day was fast drawing to a close, when the colonel, thinking perhaps to effect by diplomacy what he could not compass by force, asked Capt. Felt if he had any authority to cause the bridge to be lowered, and was answered, "There is no authority in the case, but there might be some influence." A conference was the result of this suggestion, and, upon the pledge of Col. Leslie that he would not march his troops more than fifty rods beyond the bridge and then return in a peaceable manner, "the leaf was lowered, and the troops passed quietly over, marched the stipulated distance, then wheeled and set out with all haste on their homeward march, having been completely foiled in the object of their expedition." This withdrawal without seizing the guns cost Col. Leslie his commission.

It is not recorded that Capt. Felt took any further active part in the War of the Revolution, but the patriotism of such a character could not flag, and we may sincerely believe that his deeds at the North Bridge did not terminate his efforts in behalf of American liberty.

For some years previous to the war he had been acquiring land in Danvers, and finally, April 18, 1777, he bought of Benjamin Sawyer of Boothbay, Me., "land in Danvers, near the new mills, containing twelve acres with all the buildings thereon," also a "pew in the Rev. Mr. Holt's Meeting House," and settled in

Her intentions of marriage to John Atkinson were published Sept. 13, 1746, but the bans were forbidden by the paternal Atkinson on account of "ye said John being a minor," however, on the 4th of November, he sent the following communication "To John Higginson Clerke to ye Town of Salem.— Whereas I forbid ye Banns of matrimony between my son John Atkinson & Eliza Felt I hereby signify to you that ye cause is now removed & that I have no objection ag^st^ your proceeding to publish ye same Banns." They were married Dec. 3, 1746. John Atkinson was the son of Theodore and Mary (Norman) Atkinson of Salem. He was baptized Sept. 4, 1726, and was a mariner. A minute in the notes of Rev. J. B. Felt says Elizabeth afterwards married a Rev. Mr. Harvey, "and moved to the eastward."

David Felt, born ——; died after 1792. He married Nov. 8, 1758, Susannah Becket, daughter of John and Rebecca (Beadle) Becket. She was born Dec. 11, 1740, and died Oct. 12, 1798. She was descended from Bridget Bishop,[1] who was condemned and executed for witchcraft during the reign of that terrible delusion in Salem.

It is possible that this is the David mentioned in Felt's Annals

[1] Bridget Bishop, previous to her marriage to Edward Bishop, some time before 1680, was the widow of Thomas Oliver. They had one child, a daughter, Christian Oliver, born May 8, 1667, who married Thomas Mason and died in 1693, leaving one only child, Susanna, born Aug. 23, 1687, who married John Becket in 1711, and was the grandmother of Susannah Becket. "Bridget Bishop was a singular character not easily described. She kept a house of refreshment for travelers and a shovel board for the entertainment of her guests and generally countenanced amusements and gayeties to an extent that exposed her to some scandal. . . . She was charged with witchcraft and actually brought to trial on the charge in 1680, but was acquitted, the popular mind not being quite ripe for such proceedings as took place twelve years afterwards."— Upham's Salem Witchcraft.

In 1692 she was again accused of practising the arts of a witch, and, upon such flimsy and ridiculous evidence as was then deemed conclusive, was condemned and executed in June of that year.

of Salem, as follows: "July 3, 1807. News that the schooner Prince, bound to France, was dismantled and otherwise dangerously wrecked in a gale of April 26, when David Felt, the mate, and one of the seamen were lost."

Early in life David Felt was a fisherman, sailing to the Banks of Newfoundland like a majority of his neighbors in Salem. In August, 1759, he was captured by a French shallop in the Gut of Canso and plundered of his vessel and its contents, his captors giving him and his crew the small boat in which to seek safety. They succeeded in reaching Louisburg, then occupied by the King's troops, and from there returned to Salem. Later, David Felt is known as a merchant and shoreman — a shoreman being the owner of vessels trading coastwise. Jan. 15, 1771, his brother John conveyed to him land in Norman's Lane in Salem "on which land he hath Erected a Dwelling House at his own charge, since I agreed with him for and sold him in March A.D. 1761, and I have received of said David full consideration for Rent of s^d Land from that time till this day." This property he sold May 5, 1772, to Jonathan Garner. At the time of the "Lexington Alarm," April 19, 1777, David Felt was one of the "Committee of Safety." Nov. 1, 1782, David Felt and Benjamin Needham were allowed by the General Court "to send a flag of truce to Halifax to bring home our men who are prisoners there."

Joseph Felt, born ——; died before 1790. He married Dec. 8, 1757, Mary Swan of Marblehead. He married (2d) Jan. 13, 1774, widow Abigail Lewis of Lynn. Joseph Felt first lived in Marblehead and removed from there to Salem about 1762, but shortly afterward returned to Marblehead for a time and bought of John Ullmer a mansion-house at the southerly end of that town. He also (in 1767) bought one-half of a pew in the new meeting-house in Marblehead, Wall pew No. 80, "being the third wall pew on the southwest side of the front door." This he sold to John Spinney in 1769, and removed again to Salem. He enlisted Jan. 25, 1776, under Captain Benjamin Ward, in a company of sea-coast men; was promoted to be Corporal June 27th, and discharged from the service Nov. 18, 1776. He again enlisted, Nov. 11, 1777, and served for a time in Colonel Jacob Gerrish's Regiment of Guards under Captain Miles Greenwood. By the death of her son, Blaney Lewis, Mrs. Felt (the second wife) inherited property in Lynn, in that portion of the town called Little Nahant, which, February 11, 1786, was conveyed by Joseph and his wife to Jonathan Johnson. Joseph Felt was a fisherman, a business which engaged the attention of many of the inhabitants of Salem and Marblehead.

He was a mariner, and occupied a small house near the corner of Norman and Summer streets in Salem. Rev. Joseph B. Felt, in his Annals of Salem, says, under date of Sept. 27, 1814, "A guard ship is ready for service against the English armed vessels in our Bay, which ventures boldly into our harbors to take prizes. Her commander was Geo. Crowningshield, first lieutenant, John White, and second, Joseph Felt. She was manned by young volunteers." Joseph Felt had no children, and left his property to his wife. She died in Salem, Nov. 4, 1832, aged 77.

Jonathan Felt, born in Dedham, South Parish, April 25, 1748. He married Nov. 18, 1784, Eunice Brastow, daughter of Thomas and Hannah (Mann) Brastow of Wrentham, Mass. She was born Nov. 19, 1752, and died July 2, 1802. Jonathan Felt enlisted as a volunteer at the time of the "Lexington Alarm," April 19, 1775, and marched from Wrentham in the company under command of Capt. Oliver Pond. In May he was promoted to be corporal, and served with Capt. Pond in Col. Joseph Breed's regiment at the Siege of Boston. He served during the entire period of the Revolutionary War. Jan. 1, 1777, he was commissioned a lieutenant in the Fourth Massachusetts Regiment, commanded by Col. William Shepard, and Oct. 14, 1781, was promoted to be captain in the same regiment. In 1783 he served in the Seventh Regiment. The rank of captain he held until the close of the war. He was present at the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown on the 19th of October, 1781. This fact is related by himself in a letter to his future wife, which has fortunately been preserved.

Jonathan Felt did not engage in active business after his return from the army, but in his official capacity of justice of the peace, served his townspeople, by whom he was held in high esteem. His constitution was enfeebled by the hardships of his long campaign, and he suffered from "old-fashioned consumption," of which he died, Nov. 5, 1800. The town clerk of Wrentham, his personal friend. followed the entry of his death upon the town records by this quaint memorial: "Died . . . after a long and distressing sickness which he bore with much Patience. He served his country in an honorary Station through the late Revolutionary War, and returned to his farm an indus-

He was known as "Colonel" Felt, though we do not know how he came by a military title. About 1810 Peter Felt, with Josiah and Joel Davis, converted the old iron-works on the north branch of the Souhegan into a cotton factory, which continued in operation until about 1826. At the dedication of the Third Meeting-House in 1813 he was one of the committee. He was also one of the subscribers for a new bell. From 1823 to 1830 he was a member of the Board of Trustees of New Ipswich Academy. In 1825, 1828, and 1829, he represented the town in the Legislature. Col. Peter Felt removed to Quincy, Ill., in May, 1830. After the death of his wife he married (2d) in Quincy, Jan. 7, 1841, Mrs. Alcey (Morey) Tanner, widow of Francis Tanner, who died there Oct. 11, 1882. About 1851 they removed to a farm near Columbus, Ill., about fifteen miles from Quincy.

559. IV. ALONZO MONTGOMERY, b. ——.[1]
560. V. GILBERT HEMBLETON, b. ——; d. in Newburyport in 1850. John Merrill was appointed administrator on his estate, which inventoried $2,220.02, "being the net value of $130\frac{55}{100}$ ounces of California gold." This was divided into eight parts, and one-eighth distributed each to the mother, his brothers Parnold and Alva, and his sisters Viola and Lucy, and three parts retained by the administrator. This would seem to indicate that his brothers Lucius and Alonzo and his sister Cecelia could not be found at this time. Gilbert H. Felt was a machinist, and had evidently "tried his luck" in the California gold fever. [Essex Probate, 170–134.]

[1] Notwithstanding the discrepancy in the middle initial and the difference in his father's name as it appears in the Salem Record, the compiler thinks it highly probable that Alonzo N. Felt, recorded as No. 1 in Appendix A, is identical with Alonzo Montgomery Felt.

Lucy Felt, born in Somers, March 3, 1777; died in Fredonia, N. Y., Feb. 16, 1859. She married in Hamilton, N. Y., Nov. 5, 1797, James Pettit, son of Jonathan and Agnes (Riddle) Pettit of Albany. He was born in Albany, April 13, 1777, and died in Fredonia, May 25, 1849. He graduated from Hamilton (N. Y.) College in 1805, and adopted the profession of a physician. Dr. Pettit's father removed with his family from Albany in 1796, and settled in Sherburne, Chenango County, near what is now the village of Earlville. In his early youth Dr. Pettit was both a farmer and teacher, and, after his marriage, settled in Hamilton and took up the study of medicine. He practiced first in the village of Fabius. In 1816 removed to Delphi, and after remaining there 12 years, went to Cazenovia, and from thence, in 1835, to Fredonia, where the remainder of his life was passed. Dr. Pettit was a deep thinker and close reasoner, rather than an experimenter. In the application of external remedies for the eradication of disease of the most sensitive organs, the eye and the mouth, he was preëminently successful. Dr. Pettit was commissioned by Gov. Tompkins a surgeon in the War of 1812, and in this capacity rendered service upon the frontier. In 1825 he represented the county of Onondaga in the State Legislature. In politics Dr. Pettit was a Republican. When the great struggle commenced between the antagonistic principles of freedom and slavery, he fearlessly, boldly, and uncompromisingly was one of the first to take sides with the oppressed against the oppressor. He was actuated by an abiding principle pervading his whole nature, perhaps deepened by the consciousness of his descent from an exalted Huguenot ancestry that could not abide tyranny or oppression in any form, and his counsels, words, and acts he deemed he must account for in a near eternity, and in the light of the truth there to be revealed. He became, with his wife, a member of the Baptist Church during his residence in Hamilton, and remained a worthy member of that communion until his death.

About 1842 Dr. Pettit became interested in silk culture, in which enterprise it was thought that a large fortune lurked. Mulberry trees were planted, many thousands of silk worms procured, buildings erected, and machinery bought, but the result of this experiment was summed up in a quantity of sewing silk, and numerous pairs of silk stockings knit by Mrs. Pettit's ever busy fingers, which remain as heirlooms in the family at the present day.

where he bought 300 acres of land, erected dams, built a gristmill, sawmill, and distillery, carrying on the four-fold business of lumbering, milling, distilling, and farming for many years. The distilling business was discontinued about 1832. The sawmill contained four gangs of saws, and over 3,000,000 feet of lumber was manufactured each year. From this business the place took its present name of Felt's Mills. Mr. Felt was an honorable, upright man, strictly temperate in all things. He held the office of postmaster of Felt's Mills, and at one time was supervisor of the town of Rutland, in which the village is located. He served a short time as a private in the War of 1812, and took part in the battle of Sacketts Harbor, May 29, 1813. Mr. Felt was an ardent Democrat of the school of Jefferson and Jackson, and his first vote was for Thomas Jefferson in 1804. On the repeal of the Missouri Compromise and the inauguration of squatter sovereignty he left the Democratic party and voted for John C. Fremont in 1856, and for Lincoln in 1860 and '64.

CHILDREN OF GEORGE AND MARY (DUMBLETON) FELT. (113.)

Asahel Felt, born in Springfield, Mass. (West Parish), March 1, 1772. His father moved to Albany or beyond when his children were young. There is a tradition that Asahel was taken by the Indians when a child and remained in captivity until early manhood. Another version has it that he had reached maturity when captured, and remained with them six months or so. This latter story seems improbable from the fact that no Indian troubles existed when Mr. Felt was a young man, these having ceased in the Mohawk Valley with the termination of the Revolutionary War. Tradition further states that his life was several times saved by the intervention of an Indian maiden who had lost her heart to him, and who was wont to accompany him wherever he went. One day when they were hunting together they separated at the foot of a hill with intent to meet on the farther side, but, instead of meeting her at the completion of the circuit, he took the opportunity to flee, and successfully concealed himself from his pursuers, who were promptly alarmed by the dusky sweetheart, until, under cover of the night, he was able to get completely away. We shall probably never know the truth that underlies the tradition, but the suggestion of capture in childhood seems the more tenable, and the possession of a tomahawk and scalping knife, which his children well remember, would appear to indicate a residence with the Indians, with the possible adoption of their habits during the time he remained among them.

This volume is not original, but was compiled later from the first five original record books, the entries being grouped into families as far as possible, and might easily contain errors. Both Martha and her mother must have married very young.

Jonathan and Sarah (Herrick) Porter of Salem. She was born Jan. 25, 1762, and died Dec. 27, 1817. John Felt took part in the expedition to Rhode Island in the summer of 1778. The island was at this time in possession of a body of British troops under the command of Maj.-Gen. Sir Robert Pigot, and it was determined that an attempt to recover it should be made by an American Army under Maj.-Gen. Sullivan. The Americans numbered nine or ten thousand, consisting of 2,200 Continental soldiers and seven or eight thousand militia. A company of about 100 men from Salem took part in the expedition. They left Salem Aug. 4, and landed on Rhode Island the 16th. On the evening of the 29th the American Army retired to the north part of the island. The next day they repulsed the British, and in the night effected their retreat to the mainland without loss of men or stores. In 1779 John Felt was a lieutenant in Col. Shepard's Third Massachusetts Regiment. By profession he was a mariner, and followed the sea the greater part of his life. Administration on his estate was granted his widow Sept. 26, 1796.

"Tribute of respect to the memory of Joseph Felt, who was for thirty-four years superintendent of the Lutheran Sunday-school at Savannah, Ga.:

"Our highly esteemed and venerable superintendent, Joseph Felt, has been summoned to his reward. His death occurred on the 30th of January, aged 72 years.

"He was born in Wrentham, Mass., and for the last forty-six years a resident of this city, during which time he enjoyed in an eminent degree the confidence and respect of the entire community. . . . As a citizen, he was law-abiding, unflinching in his integrity; as a public officer, prompt, impartial, just; as a Christian, meekness and humility were strongly characteristic of him, charitable, given to hospitality, with a firm and unfaltering faith; a strict temperance man, a soldier of the War of 1812, in which he served with credit. By his death the Lutheran Church of this city has lost one who never swerved from his obligations to her. In her prosperity he rejoiced, in her days of adversity he put forth increased and unceasing exertion for her advancement; he was the oldest member of her church council and trustees, and the longest in office. . . . The funeral of our deceased brother took place on the 31st of January at the Lutheran Church, the lower floor of which was filled with the relatives and friends, the galleries being reserved for the societies of which he was an honored member, and the Sunday-school, over which he presided ever since its organization, a period of thirty-four years, with great acceptability and usefulness." . . .

We have been unable to learn much concerning the children of Joseph Felt, but at the time of his death his daughter Josephine was the only survivor.

David Felt, born in March, 1793; died in New York city, at 323 W. 34th street, Sept. 10, 1873, and was buried at Woodlawn Cemetery. He married in Boston, Nov. 30, 1815, Sarah Green. She died (probably in New York), and he married (2d) about 1854, Margaret ——, who was the executrix of and beneficiary under his will, which was probated in the New York Surrogate Court, Oct. 25, 1873. Mr. Felt was engaged in the stationery business in Boston, and about 1833 removed to New York and carried on the same business, and became widely known as a manufacturer and dealer. About 1845 he purchased a large tract of land in New Jersey with the intention of establishing extensive manufactures, and building up a model village. The result of this enterprise is briefly recited in the following newspaper extract: —

"New Jersey has a real deserted village among the mountains of Union County, called Feltville, which was sold the other day at auction. Forty years ago a New York stationer, named David Felt, bought 600 acres of the wild land there, which included a water privilege, built two paper mills, a church, schoolhouse, and store, and a fine house for himself, and a lot of cottages. Mill operatives filled the cottages, and for some years the village was prosperous. There were no other villages near, not even a farm-house within two miles, and the little community lived isolated and contented. Finally Felt sold the place to Townsend, the sarsaparilla man, who manufactured his nostrum there, but after a little time he got into financial trouble, borrowed $60,000 on the property, of the Globe Life Insurance Company of New York, and this was the beginning of the end. A dozen years ago the insurance company foreclosed its mortgage, the mills were stopped, and the people necessarily began to desert the place. Then the insurance company itself went into the hands of a receiver, the property was entirely neglected, and now it presents a scene of desolation, with buildings falling to pieces, and the costly machinery covered with rust, and an old man named Thompson the only resident of the place. The whole village was sold by order of court, and Warren a wheelwright, and a first-class workman. He also carried on a farm. In politics he was originally an old-line Whig, then a "free-soiler," and afterwards a Republican. He was always a strong anti-slavery man. When a lad he served the country in the capacity of a teamster during the War of 1812, hauling provisions to the army on the northern frontier. Driving early one morning into a town, he was surprised to see it filled with "redcoats," the British having infested it the evening before. He quickly wheeled his team, and put them under the lash, and though followed by the enemy for a mile or more, escaped with no more damage than a few bullet holes through his sleigh. Mr. Felt, though not a church member, was an earnest Christian man, and held religious views similar to those of the Friends, or Quakers. He was patriotic and public-spirited, and always ready to help in any work calculated for the uplifting of the people.

Mr. Felt was a farmer. He left home before he was twenty years of age, and emigrated to Potter County, Pa., either with or soon after his brother-in-law, Silas Nelson, and settled in Eulalia Township, and lived there and in that vicinity until after 1841, when he bought a farm in Allegany County, N. Y. This, however, he did not hold long, but in 1846 returned to Pennsylvania, and settled in the town of Warsaw, Jefferson County, upon a piece of unclaimed land, which he cleared and built a house upon, but in 1848 was forced to abandon it, and removed into the adjoining township of Snyder, where he purchased one hundred acres of wild land, which he cleared for a farm. This he sold in 1864, and purchased another near Brockwayville, in the same township, where the remainder of his life was passed. In his earlier life Mr. Felt was a member of the Free Will Baptist Church, and held the office of deacon, but later transferred his relationship to the Methodist Episcopal communion.

"Abiel Chandler was a son of Maj. Timothy and Sarah Abbot Chandler, born April 2, 1807, and was the tenth of a family of twelve children. He learned the gold and silversmith and clockmaking business of his father, and went into company with him in 1829, and continued in it for several years, adding to it the manufacture of mathematical instruments. He was also employed for several years as a mechanic at the Concord Railroad shops, but for the last quarter of a century or more he has been engaged in agricultural and gardening pursuits at his residence on South Street, which he built after selling his house on West Street, now owned by Charles Thompson. He was an excellent mechanic, a very intelligent man, and a good writer on agricultural topics, being a correspondent for many years of agricultural papers, and a frequent and welcome contributor to the agricultural department of the Monitor and Statesman for several years past. He was a man of keen observation, and retentive memory, a despiser of shams, a lover of science and truth, a kind parent, friend, and neighbor, and an honest man. He inherited much of his father's public spirit, and was a valuable citizen, interested in everything that increased knowledge and fair dealing between man and man, and at the time of his death he was one of the trustees of the Public Library. His death is a loss to our city."

"Perrin Dudley has ever lived in Woodstock since his father moved here, about the year 1820, occupying the old homestead. He has been one of our most valuable and esteemed townsmen, occupying positions of trust in town affairs for many years, and always acquitting himself to the satisfaction of his constituents. As a military man, he had marked ability. In the old militia company of this town he filled every grade of office, and subsequently held the positions of major, lieutenant-colonel, and colonel of the regiment to which his company belonged. When the War of the Rebellion broke out, he was too old for active service, but he took command of a volunteer company organized for drill at Bryant's Pond, and nearly every member of his company subsequently entered the service. He was a prudent and industrious, as well as a public-spirited, man, and was able to give his children a good start in life, and what is still better, the legacy of a good name." — History of Woodstock, pp. 209–10.

John Felt, born in Mason, N. H., March 18, 1815; died in Martinsburg, Mo., Sept. 27, 1876. He married in Stoddard, N. H., July 9, 1839, Sylvia Warren, daughter of Daniel and Susan (Spaulding) Warren. She was born in Stoddard, July 23, 1817, and now lives with her son Frank in Kansas City, Kan. Mr. Felt, after completing his schooling, was employed in various occupations in and near his native town. In 1837 he went to Boston, where he studied architecture, took contracts, and erected buildings. In the spring of 1838 he went West, stopping for about a year in Zanesville, O., then removed to Quincy, Ill., and invested in a farm near the city. In 1839 he returned to New Hampshire for a wife, with whom he returned to Quincy. As illustrating the difficulty of traveling in those times in comparison with the ease in which such a journey can now be taken, the following account of "their wedding journey" is given: By stage-coach over the Green Mountains to Albany, then via the Erie Canal to Buffalo; from thence by steamer to Cleveland; by the Ohio Canal to Portsmouth, on the Ohio River. Thence by steamer to Cairo, and up the Mississippi River to Quincy, the trip occupying thirty-two days that may now be taken in as many hours. Mr. Felt pursued his contracting and building business in Quincy until 1841, when he went upon his farm and remained until 1850; then purchased a flouring mill in Melrose township, in the same county (Adams), and continued in the milling business until 1864, when impaired health compelled him to change his employment, and he went to Hannibal, Mo., and obtained a situation with the Hannibal & St. Joseph Railroad Company in connection with their bridge work. Here he became a member of the "Railroad Brigade," organized to protect lives and property from the incursions of marauders and bushwhackers, which at this period of the war were of frequent occurrence. In the spring of 1865 he purchased a farm near Canton, Lewis County, Mo., where he remained until 1870, then removed to a farm near Martinsburg, where the remainder of his life was passed.

Mr. Felt's services were greatly in demand, wherever he resided, for official work, and he held at various times such offices as township trustee, assessor, treasurer, member of school board, and was often a delegate to town and county conventions. Politically he was a Whig, then Republican, voting for Fremont and all subsequent Republican candidates for the Presidency until his death. He was a schoolmate of Franklin Pierce, afterwards President of the United States. Mr. Felt was a member of the Methodist Church, was very fond of music, and was a performer upon the violin, clarionet, and other musical instruments.

George Bullard Felt, born in Rindge, Nov. 3, 1819; married in New Haven, Conn., Sept. 29, 1845, Frances Lucretia Kellogg, daughter of Charles and Tryphena (Hubbard) Kellogg of Amherst, Mass. She was born in Amherst, Oct. 4, 1825, died in Montrose, Ia., May 26, 1880, and was buried in Keokuk, Ia.

Mr. Felt resided in Mason Village, N. H., until 21 years of age; was a part of the time employed in his father's saw and grist mill, and part of the time engaged in teaching. While a resident there he held the office of lieutenant in the militia. After leaving Mason, he lived in Boston, Ware, Cabotville, and Conway, Mass., then returned to Mason Village, and afterwards lived in Worcester and Townsend, Mass., in all these places engaged in mercantile pursuits. In 1855 he removed to Keokuk, Ia., and engaged in the auction and real estate commission business, in which he continued until 1858. After a year's sojourn in Boston, he returned to Keokuk, and engaged in the lumber business, both there and at Hamilton, Ill., and a few years later purchased pine lands, and added logging to the lumber trade. In 1868–9, he built a mill in Montrose, Ia., at the head of the Des Moines Rapids, twelve miles above Keokuk, the capacity of which was afterward increased to 20,000,000 feet of lumber a season. In 1886, Mr. Felt retired from active business, and the following year settled in San Diego, Cal., where he still resides.

They had no children. After his graduation from the High School in Keokuk in 1873, Mr. Felt went into the employ of the milling firm at Montrose, of which his father was a member, and thoroughly learned the business, commencing as a mill hand and working up to the responsible position of office manager. He afterwards went upon the road as a salesman. In March, 1884, Mr. Felt removed to Bedford, Ia., to take charge of the firm's interest in that section, and shortly after was taken down with an attack of pneumonia, from the effect of which he never recovered, the disease gradually assuming the form of consumption, and after traveling and sojourning in the South and West in search of relief, returned to Keokuk, surviving his arrival but a few hours. His brother-in-law, Dr. C. E. Ehinger, writes of him: "His leading characteristics were a strong will and resolute spirit of self-reliance. He knew no such word as failure. Yet, with all his confidence in his own abilities, there was no taint of egotism. His self-reliance was born of a proper estimate of his own resources and an innate belief in fidelity of purpose."

In 1847 he removed to Michigan and settled in the town of Bunker Hill, Ingham County. While there he followed farming, and filled a number of town and district offices, was postmaster at Felt's, and in 1858 was elected Representative to the State Legislature. In 1861 they removed to Grass Lake, in Jackson County, and continued the farming business there. In 1875 moved into the village, of which, in 1876, he was president. Mr. Clarke served as sergeant in the Kansas militia, and saw active service at the time of Price's invasion of Missouri in 1864. Mrs. Clarke died in Lawrence, Feb. 12, 1891. The following extract is from the Springfield (Mass.) Republican:

"Mrs. Hannah Maria Clarke, wife of Sheriff Clarke, died at her home on Thursday, the 12th ult. It was a great shock to the whole community, although Mrs. Clarke has been in failing health since the death of her beautiful daughter, Agnes, nearly two years ago. Mrs. Clarke, the eldest daughter of the late Col. Elijah and Hannah Lawrence Felt, was born in Fitchburg, Mass., in 1834. She was remarkable from childhood for her strength of character and intellectual ability, teaching school one year at the age of 14 with success, and after graduating from the school, at the age of 17, became one of the first editors of the Ladies' Enterprise, established in Boston. Horace Greeley was her friend, and when in Lawrence called upon her. T. W. Higginson was her valued friend and pastor in Worcester, Mass. She came to Lawrence in '58, and was a teacher in the High School with Col. Adams. She was married in 1860 to H. S, Clarke, and was the mother of seven children, five preceding her to the spirit world; the oldest, Agnes, being held in her mother's arms all through that dreadful morning of the Quantrell raid, over a quarter of a century ago, when, through the presence of mind and wonderful courage of Mrs. Clarke, her home and husband's life were spared, while the houses around her were in flames and her neighbors were shot by the ruffians before her eyes. In the Social Science Club of the State, in the local societies, and in every intellectual center of the city Mrs. Clarke's influence has been felt. She was a writer of considerable note, and was for many years a correspondent of the Republican, a paper that afforded her much pleasure and comfort. She leaves a husband, one son and a daughter in Lawrence, and two sisters, one in Worcester, Mass. (Mrs. Henry Mellen), and one in Manhattan, Kan. (Mrs. Judge Wilder). She was strongly attached to her husband, children, and friends, willing to lay down her life, if need be, for them. Dr. Howland, her pastor, paid a beautiful tribute to the deceased at the funeral services.

"He spoke of her pleasure in doing the duties next before her as a faithful wife, loving mother, and friend; of her active, vigorous mind, and her happy gifts of expression in writing and conversation; of the beauty of constant and wise gentleness which comes from self-discipline or is sometimes a gift of nature; of the joy and comfort in life; of the pain, and sorrow, and disappointment. 'But,' concluded Dr. Howland, 'we are only in the morning of existence; by and by the full day will come. This world, with all its wonders, is only as the threshold of a magnificent temple where we all shall enter, as our friend has done, one by one, and survey at our leisure its wonders, its vastness, its splendor.' The pall-bearers were personal friends of the family: Ex-Gov. Robinson, B. W. Woodward, Col. H. L. Moore, Judge Brooks, John Hutchins, and J. G. Sands. To her family the deep and heartfelt sympathy of all is extended, and only those who knew her loveliness can measure the loss that the family and community has sustained. The remains were laid to rest among the pines on a western slope in Oak Hill Cemetery, a long cortege of sorrowing friends following to pay their last tribute of love and honor to the memory of this talented and accomplished woman. X. X. X."

From the Lawrence Gazette:

"Mrs. Clarke was a lady who possessed a nature and disposition lovely and sincere. Her literary tastes were strongly developed. For sixteen years she was a correspondent of the New York Tribune, and when Horace Greeley visited Kansas he called to thank her for the excellent work she was doing. Prior to coming to Kansas she was connected with a ladies' paper in Boston.

"The sympathy she received from those who had known and loved her lost daughter was a great consolation to her during the long and weary days of her illness. She was strongly attached to her husband and children, and to them she gave all the love of an affectionate heart. To them the deep and heartfelt sympathy of all who knew the beloved wife and mother is extended, and only those who knew her loveliness can measure the loss that the family and the community has sustained."

Charlotte Frances Felt, born in Templeton, Mass, Dec. 12, 1839; married in Clinton, Mass., Nov. 21, 1861, George Carter Wilder, son of Carter and Susan (Fales) Wilder of Lancaster, Mass. He was born in Lancaster, May 31, 1837, and is descended from Thomas Wilder, who, with his brothers, Edward and Nathaniel, came from England in 1638. In 1861 he removed to Worcester, Mass., and was agent for the Worcester & Nashua Railroad. In 1867 removed with his wife to Kansas, and the following year settled in Manhattan, in Riley County, where they still remain. For eleven years Mr. Wilder was freight and passenger agent for the Union Pacific Railway. He read law after office hours, and was admitted to the bar in 1875. In 1879 he commenced the practice of his profession, in which he still continues. He held the office of police judge and justice of the peace for four years, city attorney for four years, member of the City Council and Board of Education several terms, and in 1886 was elected probate judge of Riley County, which office he still holds. While a resident of Worcester he was treasurer of the Park Street (now Trinity) M. E. Church, steward, recording steward, class leader, Sunday-school superintendent, and president of the Young People's Association. At Manhattan First Church he has been treasurer since 1869, also trustee, recording steward, Sunday-school teacher, chorister, and class leader, on several State conference committees, and examiner of Baker University. Judge Wilder inherits from his ancestors sterling integrity, and in whatever community he lives is greatly honored, not only for his ability, but for his rare manly and Christian virtues.

Mrs. Wilder is well known in the Methodist Episcopal Church, and throughout the West, as a literary and Sunday-school worker, and as taking a prominent interest in the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. She is a newspaper writer of wide experience, her articles appearing in such journals as Zion's Herald, the Worcester Spy, New York Independent, the Christian Union, Chicago Advance, Central Christian Advocate of St. Louis, Leavenworth Record, and many others. She is also the author of a number of books, prominent among them being Sister Radnour's Sacrifice, which is reviewed by the editor of the Central Christian Advocate as follows:

"It is a collection of twenty stories and sketches, some of which our readers will recognize, written in the author's sprightly manner, never without point, never without purpose, and generally with a moral that only the dullest people fail to understand. She has little patience with cant, less with fashionable conceit, and has, we suspect, some satisfaction in divesting them of their professional attire, to the greater satisfaction of her readers. From our personal knowledge we know how helpful she has been to many. Her circle of friends, an author's unseen friends, constantly increases. The missionary cause has prominence in this volume, for it is really a contribution to the work of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

Mrs. Wilder has been for twenty years the teacher of a Sabbath-school class of college students numbering upward of eighty members. Over thirty-five from the class are now in the ministry or missionary service, and others are out in the world in the various learned professions, and in positions of skill, trust, and responsibility, and so fully do most of them recognize the influence of their teacher upon their life work that they still bind themselves to her by ties of correspondence.

Dr. Fry, the editor of the Central Christian Advocate, speaking of the general appreciation accorded Mrs. Wilder's service in the cause of Christianity and humanity, says:

"Mrs. Wilder has written largely for the religious and secular press, acquiring a facility and accuracy of expression that wins upon the reader. Her mind is fertile, and selects subjects closely related to current thoughts and events. Broad views of life are presented with such skill of personal address as gives her writings an intensely practical cast. She writes always with an object beyond literary reputation, and makes the impression that the responsibilities of life are never absent from her thoughts. The rhetorical element of literary composition is not employed except under limitations which might be profitably enlarged, but the didactic qualities of her writings are not allowed to interfere with a free analysis of character, which enters, more or less, into all her sketches of every-day life.

"It follows that her work has been helpful in a large degree, especially to young people, for whom she has written much. She has gained by her writings the friendship of a large company of earnest, intelligent souls, who are trying to make the most of life. Mrs. Wilder's service, in this respect, has been invaluable."

Her work is carried on with becoming modesty. She does not court reputation or distinction, but is guided by an earnest, Christian purpose to do what good she can in the cause of the Master.

Horatio Washington Felt, born in Penfield, Feb. 1, 1827; married in Flushing, Mich., Oct. 1, 1854, Arvilla Ann Miller, daughter of Isaac and Susan (Slade) Miller. She was born in Busti, N. Y., June 22, 1832.

Mr. Felt moved to Michigan with his father in 1844, and helped clear up a new farm in Clayton, suffering the inconveniences and hardships incident to a new country. He then removed to Maple Grove, Saginaw County, upon a partly cleared farm, labored to clear the balance, and at times followed the carpenter's trade, which he had learned. While residing there he was elected justice of the peace, and was the first to hold the office in this town. When the Civil War broke out he enlisted, Sept. 23, 1861, in Co. G, 8th Mich. Infantry, and served as a private until discharged. His regiment proceeded to Hilton Head, S. C., and was present at the Battle of Port Royal, Nov. 7. They were soon afterwards stationed at Beaufort on guard duty, and Mr. Felt was here detached as hospital cook and nurse. In April, 1862, they were sent to Tybee Island, and, after a while, back to Beaufort. Then to James Island, S. C., where about half his company was destroyed while storming Fort Johnson, June 16. Subsequently, part was taken in the Battles of Second Bull Run, Aug. 30, Chantilly, Sept. 1, South Mountain, Md., Sept. 14, Antietam, Sept. 17, and Fredericksburg, Va., Dec. 13. Soon after this the regiment was transferred to the Mississippi Valley, and took part in the siege of Vicksburg, and in several engagements in that neighborhood. Afterwards they were stationed at Crab Orchard, Ky., then at Knoxville, Tenn., where Mr. Felt was left to care for the sick in hospital. While in Knoxville his term of enlistment expired, but he re-enlisted as a veteran, and, after a thirty days' furlough at home, the regiment was ordered to Annapolis, Md., then to Arlington Heights, Va., and from there started on a march and took part in the Battle of the Wilderness, Va., May 5–7, 1864, Spotsylvania Court House, May 8–18, then around to the front of Petersburg, where Mr. Felt remained caring for the sick until discharged from the service, Sept. 22, 1864.

In 1866 the family removed to Missouri, where he worked at his trade, but not being satisfactorily located there, they returned to Maple Grove after a few months' absence. Mr. and Mrs. Felt are earnest members of the Methodist Church, and it was largely by their means that a church edifice and parsonage were built in Maple Grove. He donated two acres of land for its location, and gave a tenth of his time towards the erection of the buildings. Seeking a good Christian education for their children, they sold their farm and removed to Spring Arbor, Mich, and were rewarded by seeing them graduate with honor from the classical department of the Spring Arbor Seminary. After this time the family removed to Almena, Norton County, Kan., where they now reside.

In January, 1853, with his brother James, he started for California, and was a passenger on the steamer Independence when it was wrecked and burned on the coast of Lower California, Feb. 16 of that year. Mr. Felt returned from California in 1857, and settled in Wyandotte, where he actively engaged in farming, which business had also been his chief occupation previously. So sinks the gale when storms are o'er;
So gently shuts the eye of day;
So dies a wave along the shore.'

Frances Ann Felt, born in Springfield, July 2, 1816; married in New York, March 22, 1858, Dr. William Charles Hunter, son of Dr. Galen and Elizabeth (Willard) Hunter. He died in New York, Sept. 20, 1885. Dr. Hunter graduated from the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, in 1857. He was at one time Demonstrator of Anatomy in the Medical Department of Bowdoin College. He was a member of the Academy of Medicine, the County Medical Society, the New York Pathological Society, and an officer of the Society for the Relief of the Widows and Orphans of Medical Men. He was also elder and trustee of the West 14th Street Scotch Presbyterian Church. Dr. Hunter was widely known in his profession, and was the author of many papers published in medical journals. The following article, entitled "the Beloved Physician," taken from the New York Observer, furnishes an insight to the benevolently Christian character of Dr. Hunter.

"There is no profession whose members do so much for the poor and needy as the physicians of our large cities. Conspicuous among these devoted and consecrated men was Dr. WILLIAM C. HUNTER, who, on Sabbath morning, Sept. 20, while unconscious in sleep, was called to his reward. In the morning "he was not": for God had taken him.

Born among the granite hills of New Hampshire, Dr. Hunter possessed many of the best traits of the New England character. As a resident in this great city during his years of manhood, and as an elder in the Scotch Presbyterian Church, he had a large field for the exercise of his benevolent desires. Though his practice as a physician was extensive among the wealthy classes, yet a great part of his best hours he devoted gratuitously to the poor. Not content with giving them his advice as a physician, he supplemented it with the needed medicine. A poor woman, a member of our church, who during last winter was confined to her bed for many months till death brought release, was the subject of his constant ministrations. On more than one occasion he brought to the door himself the delicacies her precarious appetite required, that she might be sure to have them without delay. She often expressed to me the comfort she derived from this thoughtfulness, as well us from his earnest prayers at her bedside. This was only one case in many. He was preëminently a man of prayer. Morning, noon, and night, he sought guidance and direction in communion with God. With an implicit trust in God, and a strong sense of personal duty, it is not surprising that he accomplished much.

How little we can realize the blessedness of that Sabbath morning when he entered Paradise, there to meet Him who is "the Chief among ten thousand," as well as the number of saved ones whom he had benefited by his medical advice, and even more by his fervent prayers."

CHILDREN OF JOHN AND ELIZABETH (CURTIS) FELT. (330.)

Joseph Barlow Felt, born in Salem, Mass., Dec. 22, 1789; died in that city Sept. 8, 1869. He married, Sept. 18, 1816, Abigail Adams Shaw, daughter of Rev. John and Elizabeth (Smith) Shaw of Haverhill, Mass. She was born in Haverhill in 1790, and died in Boston, July 5, 1859. Of her a writer in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register says: "Well educated by her mother, fully adequate for so sacred a trust, she honored the relations of her position in society. She was remarkable for her literary, moral, and religious traits of character. Her life to all with whom she was immediately connected was a constant source of beneficence." Mr. Felt married (2d) Nov. 16, 1862, Mrs. Catharine (Bartlett) Meachum, daughter of Hon. Bailey Bartlett of Haverhill, and widow of Hon. John Meachum. Of Mr. Felt perhaps no better account can be given than the following, taken from the January, 1870, number of the New England Historical and Genealogical Register,[1] to which it was communicated by Hon. J. B. F. Osgood of Salem, his nephew:

"Joseph Barlow Felt, son of John and Elizabeth-Curtis Felt, was born in Salem, Mass., Dec. 22, 1789. Of his parents he used to say that he had 'stronger faith in their declarations than in those of all the world beside.'

"He received, however, little training from his father, who was a ship master in European and India trade, and who died on Martha's Vineyard, Aug. 23, 1802, aged 38 years, after a long and trying passage from India, leaving little property to his wife and five children. The energy and influence of the mother moulded the character of the son, who ever spake of her with grateful reverence.

"After the death of his father, and at the age of 14 years, he obtained employment in a store in order to qualify himself for mercantile life. Here he remained several years, improving his few leisure hours chiefly in reading biographical works. Among these was the life of Ledyard, the traveler, and of others who obtained a collegiate education by their own efforts. Stimulated by these examples, he resolved to obtain such an education, and, in June, 1808, entered the academy in Atkinson, N. H., then under the charge of Mr. (afterwards the Hon.) John Vose, a distinguished educator of that day. In 1809, he became a member of the freshman class in Dartmouth College, whence he was graduated in 1813. During the winters of his college course he taught school. In May, 1813, he was disabled by a cold, which, settling in one of his eyes, baffled medical skill, and was ever afterwards a source of severe suffering and self-denial with regard to his studies.

"In despair of ever being able to pursue his contemplated preparation for the ministry, he became a partner in a mercantile business in Salem, but this was soon after put to an end by the revulsion that accompanied the war then going on between Great Britain and the United States. In January, 1814, although still suffering under defective eyesight, he began special preparation for the ministry, under the direction of Rev. Samuel Worcester, D.D., of Salem. While pursuing his studies he taught a private school, and continued this avocation until Dec. 17, 1819. Meanwhile he received, March 2, 1815, from the Essex Association, a license to preach, and was frequently employed by congregations in Salem and its vicinity.

"He was married, Sept. 18, 1816, to Abigail Adams Shaw, daughter of Rev. John Shaw, who died at Haverhill, Mass., Sept. 29, 1794, and of Elizabeth (Smith) Shaw, who was a sister of the wives of Judge Richard Cranch and President John Adams. Mrs. Shaw subsequently became the wife of Rev. Stephen Peabody of Atkinson, N. H., where she died April 9, 1815.

"After declining several calls from other congregations, Mr. Felt was ordained as minister of the Congregational Society at Sharon, Mass., Dec. 19, 1821, and remained there till April 19, 1824. On the 16th of June, following, he was settled at Hamilton, Mass., as successor of Rev. Manasseh Cutler, LL.D., and continued to perform his parochial duties with exemplary punctuality and faithfulness until Dec. 4, 1833, when, owing to ill health, he dissolved his pastoral relation with that church. It was a trying dispensation to one so devoted as he was to the service of his Divine Master, to be compelled to lay aside a profession, 'of which,' to use his own language, 'my experience can verily testify, that however subject to many and peculiar trials, yet, when heartily cherished and properly honored, it is the perennial spring of purer, more abundant, and sublimer joys, than those of all other human vocations, though rewarded with incalculable riches, blazoned with the most dazzling of earthly honors and inscribed highest on the scroll of worldly fame."

"During his residence at Hamilton, an address delivered before the Masonic Assembly at Ipswich, in 1825; another, before the Ipswich Academy in 1829; the preparation of many articles in Farmer's New England Genealogical Register; the publication of his invaluable 'Annals of Salem' in 1832, and also his 'History of Ipswich, Essex, and Hamilton,' in 1833, afford ample testimony to his patient industry, indefatigable research, and antiquarian taste. His love of antiquarian pursuits was acknowledged in a variety of ways: one of which was by his election, Sept. 25, 1830, to membership in the Massachusetts Historical Society, and subsequently to membership in ten other similar societies in the United States.

"Mr. Felt removed his family, Oct. 31, 1834, to Boston, where he engaged in the congenial pursuits of an antiquary and historian; contributing, in 1835, 'Ecclesiastical Statistics of Essex County' to the pages of the American Quarterly Register; in 1836, supplying a large portion of the materials of a volume of the Massachusetts Historical Society's Collections — besides the delivery of a lecture in each of four successive courses of that society.

"The State archives also bear ample evidence of his labors and patient research. In April, 1836, he was commissioned by Governor Everett to arrange the ancient papers in the State archives, which were found in indescribable confusion, and were steadily diminishing in numbers and value. Two hundred and forty-one bound volumes of these papers, classified and chronologically arranged, attest the usefulness of his task and his diligence. He was engaged in this work until April, 1839, when he was appointed to visit England to obtain duplicates of provincial records and papers, the originals of which had been lost. His visit to England, however, was prevented at that time, because the British authorities declined to allow to Americans access to their offices, lest, as was supposed, they might find evidence bearing upon the North-eastern boundary question which was then pending. In 1845, he was again commissioned to visit England for this purpose, and spent six weeks there. He then traveled through France, Scotland, and Ireland, and on his return to Boston resumed his work on the State archives, which he completed in the early part of 1846, having been engaged thereon from the spring of 1835, with the exception of a single year.

"On the 29th of December, 1836, Mr. Felt was chosen librarian of the Massachusetts Historical Society, but, as the situation was desired by Rev. T. M. Harris, D.D., with characteristic courtesy he stepped aside for him, Oct. 26, 1837. When Dr. Harris died Mr. Felt succeeded him, April 28, 1842, and remained in that office until 1854, with pleasure to himself and satisfaction to his associates.

"He published, in 1839, his 'History of Massachusetts Currency," which was an enlargement of two lectures delivered at the request of the Massachusetts Historical Society. This was an invaluable work to numismatologists; the edition has long since been exhausted.

"For more than nineteen years — viz.: from Dec. 18, 1839, to Jan. 12, 1859 — he held the office of recording secretary of the American Statistical Association, of which institution he was one of the founders. In 1841 he was elected a member of the Royal Society of Northern Antiquaries, and the same year furnished an article on the 'Fasts and Thanksgivings of New England' for Coleman's Ecclesiastical Antiquities. In April, 1845, he was chosen a corresponding member of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society. This membership was changed to resident in June, 1847, and to honorary in October, 1855.

"In 1846, he was invited to succeed Rev. William Cogswell, D.D., as president of the Gilmanton Theological Seminary, but declined accepting that trust. He had already declined two invitations to take charge of literary seminaries. In 1847, he finished publishing 'Collections for the American Statistical Association on Towns, Population, and Taxation.' In 1848, he issued a 'Memoir of Roger Conant'; in 1849, printed his second edition of the 'Annals of Salem,' in two volumes; in 1850, 'Genealogical Items for Gloucester'; and in 1851, 'Genealogical Items for Lynn,' and his 'Memoir of Hugh Peters.'

"Mr. Felt was chosen president of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society, Jan. 2, 1850, and sustained that relation three years. He edited the January and April numbers of the New England Historical and Genealogical Register for 1852; and his 'Kidd Papers,' obtained in London, 'Memoirs of Francis Higginson,' 'Sketch of Abigail Brown,' and 'Memorials of William S. Shaw,' were printed in that year. In the succeeding year, 1853, his discussion of the question, 'Who Was the First Governor of Massachusetts,' and his 'Customs of New England,' were issued from the press.

"He was chosen secretary of the Congregational Library Association in October, 1852; their librarian the next year, and, in 1854, under their auspices, published his first volume of 'Ecclesiastical History of New England.' Of this work a committee appointed by the association say: 'We take pleasure in certifying that, in our judgment, it everywhere discloses a thoroughness of research and an accuracy of statement in regard to matters of fact, which the early history of New England has never before had, and will never again need. No other writer on the subject, among the living or the dead, has devoted the time, or enjoyed the facilities which have been afforded to the author of this work. Twenty years of investigation among the best libraries of this country, and a visit to those of England, together with the overhauling of an incredible mass of old manuscripts in the archives of Massachusetts and elsewhere — undertaken con amore, and pursued with ever freshening zeal — leaves small hope of original acquisition to those who may glean after him.' The second volume of this work — the crowning labor of the author's life — was published in 1861.

"In 1857, Dartmouth College conferred upon Mr. Felt the degree of Doctor of Laws.

"Mr. Felt's first estimable and talented wife, who had been an encouraging helpmeet and a much valued assistant in all his literary labors for nearly forty-three years, died in Boston, July 5, 1859. In June, 1861, he removed to Salem, and there resided till his decease. He was a second time married, viz., Nov. 16, 1862, to Mrs. Catharine (Bartlett) Meachum of Haverhill, Mass., who survives him. He left no issue.

"We have thus given but a crude outline of the life of Dr. Felt, who was by many of his associates and friends esteemed one of the most dilligent, learned, and eminent antiquaries and annalists which America has produced, and whose researches have accomplished much for future historians, and preserved from oblivion many interesting incidents relating to New England matters. Reserved and retiring in his private life — never showing any desire for notoriety — he was highly exemplary in the various relations of son, husband, brother, pastor, friend, and citizen; and constantly illustrated the benevolence of his heart by endeavors to increase the happiness of others. By his willingness to aid any seekers after information he proved his fitness to be a guide in antiquarian and historical research.

"He was a liberal contributor to many public institutions of science and literature. A notable instance of this may be recalled from Quincy's History of the Boston Athenæum, when, as the legal representative of his brother-in-law, William S. Shaw, who died, leaving claims against the Athenæum amounting to ten thousand dollars, Mr. Felt 'voluntarily and most liberally executed a release of the whole claim and thereby constituted Mr. Shaw a benefactor to the institution to that amount.' His high appreciation of the literary institutions at Atkinson and Hanover, is manifested by liberal legacies to each in his last will and testament.

"Perhaps some have thought that Dr. Felt was too prone to press his religious views upon the notice of his readers; but it may well be said that his life illustrated his moral teachings. There was such amiableness, living conscientiousness, and saintly sincerity in his conversation and daily life, that one who has known him long and intimately may well be pardoned for applying to him the words: 'Behold an Israelite indeed in whom is no guile.'

"On Sunday, Sept. 3, 1865, Dr. Felt, upon returning home from religious service, sat down, as was his daily custom, to write in his diary. He had written the text of the afternoon sermon: James, 4th chap. 14 verse — 'Whereas ye know not what shall be on the morrow. For what is your life? It is even a vapour, that appeareth for a little time and then vanisheth away.' With the last word of the text his pen wandered over the page in random scrawls, and he fell back in his chair paralyzed and apparently lifeless. The shadows of coming death had already gathered upon his brow and extinguished his usefulness forever. For, although he partially recovered from that state of insensibility, it was only to live lingeringly for four long years, wholly incapacitated for literary labor, but ever cherishing 'the hope,' as he once expressed himself, that 'his Saviour would soon take him home.' Thus, in unshaken confidence of a better portion hereafter, his body gradually yielded to disease, and on Sept. 8, 1869, at the age of 80 years, he gently departed this life, full of years and honors; having lived the life of an earnest Christian, an amiable gentleman, a diligent scholar, and a useful citizen."

The following resolutions were passed by the New England Historic-Genealogical Society, Sept. 22, 1869:

"The death of Rev. Joseph B. Felt, LL.D., a former president of the society, was announced; and the following resolutions, offered by Rev. Dorus Clarke, D.D., were passed:

"Resolved, That in the recent removal by death of the Rev. Joseph Barlow Felt, LL.D., the society would devoutly recognize the agency of a righteous Providence, and would bow with submission to His holy will.

"Resolved, That this society and the interests of History generally are largely indebted to Dr. Felt, who was one of the earliest presidents and an editor of the New England Historical and Genealogical Register and Antiquarian Journal, for the deep interest he took in historical and genealogical researches, especially at a period when that subject had not received, in this country, the comparatively scientific and thorough consideration which has more recently elevated it to a high and honorable position in the department of letters.

"Resolved, That the corresponding secretary transmit an attested copy of these resolutions to the widow of Dr. Felt."

And Oct. 6, 1869:

"The president referred to the recent death of Rev. Dr. Felt, and was followed by J. Wingate Thornton, Esq., who briefly sketched the literary and private character of the deceased, with whom he had been intimately acquainted and associated for many years. Mr. Thornton offered, and on motion of Rev. Lucius R. Paige, D.D., the society adopted the following resolution, viz.:

"Whereas, Joseph Barlow Felt, LL.D., an early friend and efficient President of this society, has died (Sept. 8, 1869), in serene old age and Christian hope, after a life of industry and usefulness,

"Resolved, That we record his death with profound respect for his scrupulous integrity, warm heart, and distinguished services in the local and general history of New England, and as an example in his own life of the good old Puritans whom he revered and with the history of whose institutions his name is identified."

William Nelson Felt, born in Wrentham, Jan. 12, 1828; died in New Britain, Conn., May 23, 1885. He married in New Preston, Conn., Oct. 19, 1864, Fannie Pomeroy Whittlesey, daughter of David Chester and Mary (Cogswell) Whittlesey. She was born in New Preston, Oct. 14, 1838, and resides in New Britain.

"OBITUARY. — Maj. William N. Felt died at his residence in this city on Saturday, May 23, after a brief illness. It was not until Friday that his family saw any cause to be alarmed. Maj. Felt was born in Wrentham, Mass., in 1828. At the breaking out of the war he was engaged in business in New York, and he very early enlisted in the 1st New York Regiment. While in the army, on the peninsula, he was transferred to the subsistence department, and there remained during the greater portion of the war, being promoted for meritorious services to the rank of major. After the war he settled in this city [New Britain], and engaged in the dry goods business, in which he continued until the time of the late fire, when his place of business and stock of goods were destroyed. Maj. Felt was a prominent and active member of the Center Church, and assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school. He was remarkably well read in the Scriptures, especially the Old Testament, and was an intelligent and active observer of current history. He was greatly respected for his integrity in business affairs, and for his modest worth in life. His cheerful greeting will be greatly missed by a host of friends. He has not for some time been in robust health, and his last sickness appeared to be a sudden breaking down of his vital energies, rather than any pronounced disease. He leaves a widow (sister of Mr. Frederick Whittlesey of this city), one son and two daughters."

A friend writes of him: "His whole military life was characterized by a strict adherence to duty. I think I can safely affirm that no one could charge him with a neglect of any duty, no matter how severe or repugnant its performance might have been. He was always spoken of by his superiors and companions in terms of the highest respect."

Mr. Felt was engaged in the hotel business. He commenced his career when a young man as proprietor of the Bellows Falls (Vt.) Hotel. Later, he was clerk of the Pavilion Hotel in New Haven, Conn., and in 1856 went to the Planters House in St. Louis, Mo. In 1864 took the Lindell House in St. Louis, and, when that was burned in 1867, went to Chicago and was associated with John B. Drake in the management of the Tremont House. Immediately after the great fire in Chicago he had charge of the office in the Gardner House, the first hotel opened in the rebuilt district. In 1874 he returned to St. Louis and became one of the proprietors of the New Lindell, the plans for which construction he had himself drawn. He was reputed to have had the largest hotel acquaintance of any man of his time. Mr. Felt, though quiet and unobtrusive, was a man of wide accomplishments, an art critic, and a fine judge of music. When the war broke out he was the first to hoist the Union colors, and though many times ordered to "pull down that flag," kept his colors flying in spite of threats. Though always living in the midst of temptations, he maintained a clean and orderly life. He never made an enemy, and among his numerous personal friends reckoned many distinguished men. With Gen. Grant and Gen. Sherman he had an intimate acquaintance. Mrs. Felt is engaged in the conduct of a ranch in Colorado, and is a lady of many accomplishments.

CHILDREN.

2193. I. WILLIAM SHERMAN, b. in St. Louis, Jan. 14, 1867; was named for Gen. Sherman, who was his godfather, and wrote on this occasion a letter to the child's mother from which the following is an extract: "Though I fear I cannot promise much guardianship in matters of modern piety, I will in after life be most happy to watch his rise and progress, and can, it may be, impart to him the knowledge of those old-fashioned manly qualities that have existed from the beginning of time and which have manifested themselves in some shape at all ages of our kind. . . . In California the godfather became responsible for the youth's gambling debts, and I am willing to incur that responsibility if you promise to turn him him over to me for punishment the first time you catch him betting on chances."

Mr. Felt graduated from Michigan Military Academy in 1884, and in Colorado served as an officer in the National Guard. He removed to Mexico, and married in Topolo-

CHILDREN OF GEORGE WASHINGTON AND ADELIA (NEAGLES) FELT. (462.)

1209.

George Washington Felt, born in Concord, N. H., July 27, 1838; married in Paynes Depot, Scott County, Ky., Nov. 15, 1865, Anna Eliza Crooks, daughter of Harrison Lysle and Amanda Melvina Fitz-Allen (Grant) Crooks of Galena, Ill. She was born in Owensville, Bath County, Ky., Sept. 3, 1843. They reside in Sioux City, Ia.

Mr. Felt was educated in the Boston schools, finishing at the English High School. When sixteen years of age he shipped before the mast, and made a voyage to San Francisco, Cal., and from there to points in South America. In 1855 he went to Galena, Ill., and found employment as a clerk in the large wholesale house of L. S. Felt & Co., with whom he continued until the War of the Rebellion broke out, when he enlisted as a private (Sept. 21, 1861), in Co. G, 3d Missouri Cavalry. He advanced through the lesser grades, and at the time of his muster out, Nov. 22, 1864, held the rank of first lieutenant. He took part in the Battle of Hurtoille, and was at the capture of Little Rock, and in the series of engagements preceding it, as well as in many other actions. After his discharge from the service he returned to his old position at Galena, but, in 1868, removed to Sioux City, Ia., and engaged in business for himself, establishing large trading posts among the Indians at various points along the Missouri River, at which he bought large quantities of furs, hides, and buffalo skins. In 1881 he acquired about 27 acres of land on the Floyd River, now known as Felt's Addition, which soon began to develop as choice railroad property. Meanwhile Sioux City was growing rapidly, and its mercantile interests began to assume large proportions. There was a clamor for manufactures as the means to a more permanent prosperity than could be expected from mere expansion of mercantile interests. Accepting this truth, Mr. Felt aided in forming a syndicate, known as the Leeds Improvement and Land Company, which took upon itself the duty of encouraging and locating manufacturing interests in Sioux City. Mr. Felt became a director in this corporation, and also president and general manager of the Daniel E. Paris Stove Company.

After his marriage Mr. Yates worked at the furniture manufacturing business in Locke's Mills, and two years later removed to Norway, and continued in the same line of work. He remained in Norway about two years, and then went to Auburn and engaged in trade, until the breaking out of the war, when he received an appointment as enlisting officer and detective in the United States service. At the close of the war he went to Bothwell, Canada West, and engaged in the oil business, but in the fall of 1866 removed to Portland, and prepared to carry out a long cherished plan, namely, the study of medicine, and soon fitted for and entered the Medical Department of Bowdoin College, where he graduated at the head of his class in 1870. He then settled in West Paris, where he has since remained in the practice of his profession, one of the largest and best in Oxford County.

Dorr Eugene Felt, born in Newark, Wis., March 18, 1862; married in Chicago, Ill., Jan. 15, 1891, Agnes McNulty, daughter of George Washington and Ann Arabella (Rhea) McNulty of that city. She was born in Bellevue, Ia., April 2, 1863. They reside in Chicago. Mr. Felt learned the machinist's trade, and worked at it until the spring of 1884, since which most of his time has been devoted to invention. The principal invention which he claims is the "comptometer," a practical calculating machine operated by keys, and claimed to be the only one which can be used in the solution of all mathematical problems. It is manufactured by the Felt & Tarrant Company, of which Mr. Felt is president. The following description and account is from the Chicago Journal of Aug. 29, 1888:

"A Journal reporter, having heard of a very curious novelty that had just been perfected by a Chicago man, went down yesterday to the machine shops of Robert Tarrant, on Illinois Street, near Market, to examine the calculating machine invented by Dorr E. Felt. Mr. Felt happened to be in the office, and immediately entered upon a full and interesting explanation of a contrivance calculated beyond any other in general use to save the grey matter of brains which are constantly employed in the massing of arithmetical symbols.

"Mr. Felt is a modest young man who looks as if he might be a school-teacher or a divinity student, but, althongh he is only 26 years of age, he has already, in various ways, shown himself to be a man of rare inventive genius, of which the 'comptometer,' or calculator, is the latest and most important product.

"The standard instrument is 14¼ inches long, 7¼ inches wide, 5 inches high, weighs 8 pounds, and can be manipulated without inconvenience on any ordinary desk or table. It differs from all former mechanical calculators in that, like the typewriter, it is worked altogether by keys.

"Two or three instruments, with a similar object in view, had been previously constructed — notably one by a Kentucky monk — which were capable of making computations in the rule of addition, but with only one column of keys, leaving part of the work to be performed mentally; whereas Mr. Felt's invention carries all the columns in sums of addition at the same time, and performs all operations, even to the smallest fraction — as well as to the highest power in billions — in the four fundamental rules of arithmetic, on eight columns of keys.

"An expert on this instrument can work as rapidly as a typewriter, and the merest novice can work as rapidly as the most expert accountant working on the old mental system. Mr. Joseph S. McCoy, acting Government Actuary of the United States Treasury Department, Washington, D. C., who has tried the instrument, states that an intelligent novice rapidly becomes the superior of the most skilled expert in the old method, and he bases his assertion upon the unfailing accuracy and speed of the comptometer.

"The reporter took out his notebook and wrote down the figures 4,782, which he proceeded to multiply by 98 as rapidly as he could. Mr. Felt brought his instrument into requisition, and when the reporter had commenced to multiply with the second figure the instrument had recorded the full answer, 468,636. The number 4,782 was then multiplied by itself, and when the reporter had reached the third figure of the multiplier Mr. Felt sang out the answer, 22,867,524. The number 423 was then multiplied by 476, and divided the result by 423, when the correct quotient was reached by the instrument before the nimble scribe had commenced his division. The following sum was then tackled: Suppose you bring £234 from England to New York, where the rate of exchange is $4.84⅞, what is the American value of your money? In a second the very ready reckoner had recorded $1,134.60¾, while the slow but earnest newsman was wrestling with the preliminary fraction.

"In reference to the speed and accuracy of his instrument, Mr. Felt said: 'When I was in Washington last year I was invited by officials of the Treasury Department to exhibit the comptometer in the presence of experts. Gen. Rosecrans was particularly interested in the instrument, but was unable to be present at the expert test. Those experts are certainly "dandies" at their craft. They are mighty smart fellows, and I felt considerable timidity about a tussel with them. However, the official who acted as examiner gave out five long sums in the four rules. The experts worked away with their pencils, and I with my instrument. In four cases out of the five I finished first — though I am only a novice — and my answers were quite correct, while all the experts, in their desperate efforts to keep up with me, got off the track and were wrong in every calculation. In the fifth case the experts finished first, but were wrong, while my answer was correct.'

"The mechanical construction of the comptometer, under the supervision of the inventor, is as nearly perfect as human skill can make it, all the operating parts being made of the finest hardened steel, thereby insuring the greatest degree of permanence and the least degree of friction. As an instance of the expense incurred in perfecting the instrument, it may be stated that more dies are used in the construction of the comptometer than are to be found in any typewriter."

Eli Felt, born in Smyrna, April 3, 1819; died in Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 5, 1885. He married in Smyrna, April 13, 1842, Olive Talcott, daughter of Joshua and Serissa (Taylor) Talcott. She was born in that town June 15, 1822 Mr. Felt's father designed for him a college education, but, his health failing, he was compelled to alter his plans. After his marriage he settled in Big Flats, Chemung County, N. Y., and engaged in lumbering, and in January, 1849, removed to Shippen, McKean County, Pa., then a wilderness, and there conducted the same business. As people settled in the neighborhood, he turned his attention to building a hotel for the accommodation of new-comers, which he called the "Emporium Hotel," and from this beginning the town of Emporium received its name. Mr. Felt was largely instrumental in having the County of Cameron set off and the county seat established in Emporium. In 1861 he removed to Philadelphia, intending to carry on a lumber business there, but his plans were frustrated by business stagnation caused by the Civil War, and he exchanged real estate in Emporium for a peach farm in Delaware. After this, in company with his eldest son, he engaged in the manufacture of patent medicines. In the fall of 1869 he removed to Warrenton, N. C., having traded the Delaware farm for an interest in a plantation of 1,500 acres near that place. In 1883 he removed to Wake Forest, N. C., where the remainder of his life was passed.

In his youth Mr. Felt learned the blacksmith's trade, and worked at that and farming in a number of places in Michigan and Ohio. Aug. 8, 1861, he enlisted and served as a private in Co. E, 7th Michigan Infantry, until discharged for disability, May 26, 1862. He again enlisted Sept. 5, 1864, serving as a mechanic, and was discharged June 25, 1865. After his return he worked at his trade in Wyandotte, Mich., until 1871, when he took up the study of medicine, and graduated from Detroit Medical College in March, 1876. He located in New Boston, and attends to an active and extensive practice. In early life Dr. Felt pursued his trade in Marquette, on Lake Superior, and on leaving that locality traveled on snowshoes through the wilderness to Green Bay, a distance of 219 miles, the journey occupying six days. Dr. Felt has invented and patented a road cart and cutter, the latter constructed on a principle that does away with jolting. The gearing is made in two separate halves, connected by an axle; the runners are independent of each other, and keep the box level, and the cutter can be turned around in deep snow as easily and safely as a cart. He has been for many years a member of the Methodist Church, and has served his fellow-citizens in several public capacities.

The compiler acknowledges his indebtedness to Dr. Felt for valuable service rendered in securing data from the families in his vicinity.

Andrew Jackson Felt, born in East Victor, N. Y., Dec. 27, 1833; married in Bradford, Ia., Feb. 21, 1858, Emily J. Rutherford, daughter of A. R. Rutherford of Nodaway County, Mo. She was born in Fairfield County, O. The following account is derived largely from a published History of Kansas. Mr. Felt was educated in the Hamilton (N. Y.) Academy. He commenced teaching at the age of 16, and followed that profession three years. He then began the study of law with Thomas Frothingham of Rochester, and completed his legal studies with Judge Nichols of Shelbourne, N. Y., but, becoming enthusiastic in regard to the West, emigrated to Iowa before being admitted to the bar. This was in the autumn of 1855, and, during the following winter, he taught school in a blacksmith shop upon the present site of Luana, Clayton County. In 1856 Mr. Felt assumed editorial control of the North Iowa Times of McGregor, and remained in that position until March, 1857, and was shortly after admitted to the bar of Chickasaw County. Instead of actively commencing the practice of law at that time, he began the publication of the Cedar Valley News at Bradford, opening a law office in connection with his newspaper business as soon as the latter became established. One year later he sold out his interest in the paper, and, entering into partnership with M. V. Burdick, devoted all of his energies to the practice of his chosen profession. Later, he renewed his editorial connection with the North Iowa Times, but war breaking out, he enlisted in May, 1861, as a private in Co. B, 7th Iowa Infantry. He was taken prisoner at Belmont, Mo., Nov. 7, 1861, remaining in the hands of the enemy for nearly a year. Was then in hospital at Annapolis from October, 1862, to February, 1863. He rejoined his regiment at Corinth, Miss.; was promoted to be sergeant, and returned to Iowa in the spring of 1864. Mr. Felt proceeded immediately to West Union, Fayette County, established The Public Record and conducted it until 1866, when he sold out, and in May, 1867, started The Nashua Post. This he disposed of in 1874, and purchased an interest in the Waterloo Courier. In October, 1875, he abandoned journalism for a time and established a private bank in Nashua. Mr. Felt was postmaster at Nashua from 1869 to 1874; was delegate to both conventions that nominated Gen. U. S. Grant for the Presidency, being secretary of that of 1868, and chairman of the congressional convention which nominated W. C. Deering in August, 1867. In January, 1880, he disposed of his bank, and removed to Seneca, Kan., where he established the Tribune, building a fine brick office for its accommodation. The first issue of this paper appeared June 7, 1881. In 1884 Mr. Felt was Presidential elector on the Republican ticket in the First Congressional District of Kansas. In 1885 he was appointed by Governor Martin a member of the State Board of Pardons, and served up to January, 1889. In November, 1888, he was elected Lieutenant-Governor of Kansas on the Republican ticket, and was again elected to the same office in November, 1890. Since the expiration of his last term he has become editor of the Atchison Champion, one of the leading newspapers of the State.

NAMES FROM CITY DIRECTORIES.

The following list of names of persons of apparently American lineage is of those from or of whom the compiler has been unable to gain information. In some instances his letters have never reached the person addressed, and in the others have elicited no response. Other names have been found, but so evidently those of persons of foreign birth or extraction that they have not been recorded here. It may be remarked that the insertion or omission of a middle initial, combined perhaps with a change of location, may so have changed the identity of an individual that his name when found in a directory has not been recognized as one already recorded in the Genealogy.

APPENDIX D.

(See page 156.)

[From the Boston Evening Transcript of Nov. 7, 1888.]

A DESERTED VILLAGE.

A deserted village! What interest is awakened by these words. One autumn day I drove up to the tavern in Scotch Plains, N. J., to have my horse watered and to make inquiries of the good old colored man who performed the office. My question seemed to amuse him. "Sarted village!" said he, with a chuckle which shook his sides. "Doan know no sarted village roun' yere. Guess yo' mus' mean Feltville."

"Yes, that is the name," said I, and thereupon he gave me such lucid directions that I could not go astray.

Scotch Plains is not unknown in history, and was settled in the seventeenth century by Scotch emigrants of high birth and education. They landed at Amboy, N. J., in 1684, and pushed into this country, which was richly timbered and filled with game. A few minutes' drive through the town brought us to a narrow little road leading off to the right, a guide-board, plainly marked "Feltville," standing sentinel at the corner. We were just at the base of the Orange Mountains, and, turning into this road, we found that we were making a gradual ascent. On our left was a sluiceway, almost as wide as the road itself, down which dull, leaden water was slowly flowing. The common wild flowers grew rank along its edge, tall bushes bending over; and with the mountain range towering above, we felt as if we were riding into a wilderness. We passed one mill, which appeared to be in a prosperous condition, then several buildings so irrevocably gone to decay that we were sure we were on the right road to a deserted village.

And yet on the very outskirts of civilization, with flourishing cities and towns all about it, little seems to be known of the "deserted village," and few comments are made by those who have visited it. As early as 1720 the spot was called Peter's Hill, and was owned by one Peter Willcocks, his grant consisting of about 450 acres of land.

In revolutionary times gunpowder was made there, and the mill was built in a ravine well hidden from view, and favorably located for its purposes.

It was about the year 1845 that Mr. David Felt visited the place. He had extensive factories in Brooklyn for the manufacture of stationery goods, with a retail store in New York, long known as Felt's Stationery Hall. Mr. Felt conceived the idea that this would be an ideal spot on which to found a village, where the inhabitants would be removed from the temptations and sorrows of city life; goodness, peace, and plenty to abound.

He purchased a tract of land consisting of about six hundred acres, and in this lovely glen, hemmed in by mountains on every side, began the existence of Feltville. He erected large factories on the site of the old powder mill, with rooms for the marbleizing of paper (an improvement of his own), and facilities for printing, for manufacturing stationery, and for the binding of books. A large force of hands was employed, and on the bluffs above the mill he built rows of pretty cottages for their occupancy. He laid out wide avenues, erected a large mansion for his own residence; the whole village seemed a corner of Utopia. Although an austere man, Mr. Felt was an upright, honest one, and had the welfare of his operatives near his heart. He wished that their means should not be wasted, but saved to themselves and their families. It was his desire to have the village complete in itself, and it included a store, schoolhouse, chapel, and hall for pleasure gatherings. There was no need of mayor or magistrate, for "King David," as Mr. Felt was called, settled the disputes which arose among his people, and though he ruled them with a severe and trenchant hand, it was nevertheless a just one.

But there came a day when the whole of Feltville was bargained away for a block of brown-stone houses in New York. Whether Mr. Felt tired of his scheme, or failed to make it the success desired is not known, but he sold the place to Dr. S. P. Townsend, or "Sarsaparilla" Townsend, as he was called, the houses being known as "Townsend's Row."

Little is known of Feltville afterwards, save that the investment was an unprofitable one to Dr. Townsend, who ere long sold out to a Mr. Trafton, the purchaser paying $20,000 and giving a mortgage of $82,000. Little, too, is remembered of Trafton, except that he used the factories for a saw mill and sawed up much of the timber which grew in that locality.

After Trafton's time it became a veritable "deserted village," and it well deserved the name. The cottages were deserted, the mansion abondoned, and the once busy hum of machinery and voices hushed and still. Thus Feltville remained for seventeen years, the place forsaken, the buildings gradually going to decay.

During these years Mr. Felt was once asked to visit the spot. "I will never go to Feltville unless compelled," he replied. "And then I'll never look upon it, for I'll shut my eyes as I go through."

Slowly winding our way past the tumble-down buildings and two or three scattered farm-houses, a level bit of road brought us to a large rustic gate, flanked by the formidable sign, "No trespassing under penalty of the law." However, we found that the gate would open, and so we ventured.

The road led directly to the old mill, which we found to be stored with corn, the great yellow ears protruding from every opening and crevice; and we learned that the whole place had been purchased by Mr. Ackerman of Scotch Plains for the sum of $10,000, to be used henceforth as a stock farm.

But if the village was no longer in a dilapidated condition, it was almost as nearly deserted; and if robbed of some of the romance, it had been only partially awakened from its deep slumber.

Just at the mill the road made a detour, and then there was a hard, steep climb up to where the cottages were located. Behind the cottages this bank was so abrupt that the earth was stoned up to the height of ten or twelve feet, looking like a barricade from the mill.

But the avenue above was broad, and lined on either side by large cherry trees — doubtless a delightful promenade for the swains and lassies of the early days of Feltville.

Although the cottages had been restored by Mr. Ackerman, and freshened by coats of paint, they were nearly all untenanted, and their silence was not ineloquent. Summer houses were still standing in the places where Mr. Felt erected them, and many an arch look and tender word they might reveal.

The hall where the village dances took place was closed and shuttered, but it needed no very vivid imagination to people it again, and to hear the strains of the violin mingled with happy voices.

The old mansion had not yet been disturbed, and, peeping through the blinds, I could see that the rooms in the main portion of the house were large, long, and of medium height, but the L might have dated back to the days of Peter Willcocks. One little room, evidently designed for the study or Mr. Felt's office, had an odd-looking fireplace in the alcove, beside which was a sort of secretary built into the house. Many of the shelves and drawers were missing, while the plastering had fallen away from about the fireplace, and, together with soot and ashes, lay upon the hearth.

The shelves and glass doors at the opposite corner of the room had more the appearance of a decayed museum than a bookcase. This room, although so small, occpied the L from side to side, but there were more rooms back of it till the kitchen was reached, with another fireplace and remnants of a corner cupboard and dresser.

These glimpses were obtained in a most cursory manner, over yawning chasms or from piazzas whose condition threatened one's disappearance into unknown regions.

The little enclosed garden in front of the house showed signs of having been a pattern one, and the rows of box, overgrown and tangled with running vines, was still green and shiny.

Tall elms stood before the gate, which in the olden days had opened to many a welcome guest; and, intruder that I was, I quickly made my exit, finding myself upon another avenue. The door of the store was half-way open, but on the counters lay no gay calicoes nor bright woolen stuffs, the room being littered with various farming implements.

At the end of this avenue another gate opened upon what is called the upper mountain road, and here stood the old schoolhouse, now used as a toolhouse, and freshly furbished by a coat of paint.

As we slowly wended our way back over the descending road, an almost complete view could be obtained of Feltville, with the exception of the mill. In a vale hemmed in by mountains the little village lay, not yet awakened from its long lethargy, broad acres of undulating fields sloping up to the encircling hills.

Back again, near the old store, I met an urchin, who proved a valuable acquaintance.

During our conversation he asked me if I had been to the old burying-ground. Upon answering in the negative, he offered to show me the way, and scrambling down dale and up hill we found ourselves in a little corner of "God's Acre."

"Two girls were drowned up to Felt's Lake one time," said my little guide, "and there's where they are buried," pointing to two small stones which bore no trace of an inscription.

Poor girls, they sleep, their graves unkept and forgotten, but mayhap containing a romance as tender and sweet as any yet recorded.

Many of the stones had fallen quite away from the spot where they were placed, while others were pushed to one side by trees of considerable size.

I was reminded of that little story of the monk who dearly loved a beautiful young girl, and when she died he had her buried in the garden where they used to sit. Over her grave there grew a beautiful white acacia tree, which the monk declared sprung from her pure heart.

Did not those tall pines and strong oaks spring from the hearts of the sturdy pioneers? The bitter-sweet among them surely grew from out the hearts of the patient women who shared with them in courage and faithfulness their early privations.

One slab was still standing, which bore the following inscription:

In Memory of Mr. John Willcocks, he deceas'd Novem'r The 22d, 1776, Aged 49 years.
John, a son of Peter Willcocks, and dead more than a hundred years.

Just over a little bridge, quite near to the mill, was a ravine to which our small friend directed us. The mountain looked as if some primeval disturbance had severed it from base to summit, and in the rift were rocks and boulders, with tall trees growing in their midst, indicative of peace after the upheaval. At the entrance was a spring of water, which trickled down the rocks, running into a weather-beaten and moss-grown trough, and overflowing wandered over the pebbles at our feet.

The gorge reminded one of the boldness of Colorado scenery, and we clambered from rock to rock and jut to jut, the sky a narrow strip of blue above us. After reaching the summit, the view was still cut off by surrounding elevations.

The road back to the entrance gate was bordered by Green Brook, like a silver thread flowing along beside it, and over the pastures hundreds of cattle were roaming and grazing, the larger portion being yearlings and heifers. Our presence seemed in no wise to disturb them, if we except half a dozen calves, that frisked off at sight of us.

As the big gate slowly swung upon its hinges, we felt it shut us out of a little world, with a history all its own.

IN CONCLUSION.

THE compiler desires to call attention to one or two matters:

First, that in a work of this character, difficulty sometimes arises in deciding upon the correctness of a date, sources of information being sometimes memory, sometimes the family Bible, copies of the Bible record, and the town records. Where these differ, as is not infrequently the case, nothing can be done but to use the one seemingly the most plausible, and trust to its correctness.

And, second, to the apparent use of pet and nick-names. In the blank form sent out for family records a note calls attention to this matter; but notwithstanding this, such names as Willie, Lizzie, Bertie, etc., are frequently returned, and inasmuch as sometimes these are baptismal names, the compiler does not feel authorized to correct their construction.

Certain names that have a broad rendering, such as Jennette, Jeanette, Jennet, Janet, etc., always leave the impression that an incorrect rendering may have been given. Sometimes an apparent attempt is made to continue a family name, but with such an erroneous interpretation of it as to make a new name altogether. For instance, in one branch of this family the Christian name of Jehiel is common; but a member of this branch reports his son as named Jay Hial, very plainly written, and evidently the name by which he is known, but as evidently a corruption of the name in such common use in that family. The names Dow and Dorr, Warner and Warren, and others of similar appearance when pen written, may be readily confused by one who is not cognizant of the correct name. In some instances where the compiler has felt certain that the orthographical rendering contains the elements of carelessness or ignorance, he has taken the liberty of correcting it, but prefers in the main to leave such things as they have been given him.
